State Gov. Tom Ridge meets with 1995 and 1996 Pennsylvania dairy princesses, their parents and local representatives on the occassion of being recognized by the state House of Representatives for making Oct. 7 state Honor the Dairy Farmer Day. From the left is Jan Harding, coordinator of the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Promotion Program Inc.; Erie County state Rep. Tom Scrimenti, who sponsored a resolution to create the special day and a citation from the House to honor 1995 state Dairy Princess Rhonda Kieklak; Richard, Robin and Rhonda Kieklak, Gov. Tom Ridge, 1996 state Dairy Princess Angela Werley, her parents Phillip and Donna Werley, and Berks County state Rep. Sheila Miller.

On the floor of the state House of Representatives, state Rep. Tom Scrimenti presents a state House citation commending 1995 state Dairy Princess Rhonda Kieklak for her work to help promote the state's dairy industry, while Scrimenti also acknowledges the promotion efforts of current state Dairy Princess Angela Werley.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rhonda Kieklak, the 1995 state dairy princess was cited and honored Monday by the state House of Representatives for her work in promoting the state's dairy farmers.

Kieklak, of Erie County, and current dairy princess Angela Werley, of Berks County, stood on the floor of the House of Representatives in Harrisburg as Erie County Rep. Tom Scrimenti praised the work of Kieklak and the dairy princesses in promoting the state's dairy industry, the leading sector of the state's largest industry — agriculture.

Kieklak not only was honored as the 1995-96 dairy princess on Monday, but it was Monday, Oct. 7, state Dairy Farmers Appreciation Day — a recognition of dairy farmers that would probably have not been possible without the efforts of Kieklak.

Conservation Awards Highlight Conference Banquet

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Conservationists and many persons and organizations who support them were honored at the awards banquet Tuesday night as part of the 49th joint annual conference of the State Conservation Commission and the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts. The Lancaster County Conservation District played host to the conference.

Receiving the outstanding farmer award is Walnut Acres Farm in Snyder County. This award is presented to the farmer who has furthered conservation through the establishment and maintenance of soil, water, and nutrient management practices. Walnut Acres has been a cooperator with the Snyder County Conservation District since 1959 and is one of the most successful organic farms in the nation. The production from their cropland is marketed through the farm store and processing plant in Penns Creek.

Started 50 years ago, Paul Keene operated on the belief that using no chemicals and practicing crop rotation will maintain soil fertility and control disease. Today, Walnut Acres not only advocates their soil conservation and organic farming methods, they bring them to life on their 589 acres.

WATERSHED PROTECTION

The Octoraro Watershed Association between Chester, Lancaster, and Cecil Counties received the watershed protection award. This award recognizes and individual or organization that has protected a particular watershed through a coordinated land and water resource appeal.

Over the past 29 years, the Octoraro Watershed Association has promoted better farming practices through soil and water conservation practices and education to improve the water quality within the watershed. The watershed covers 208 square miles. In the 1980's the Association won designation for the Octoraro Creek as one of the first Pennsylvania Scenic Rivers System. Since 1991 they have

Corn Talk

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) board of directors unanimously approved a resolution requesting that Charles Brosius, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, appoint a committee to study the feasibility of a state corn promotion program.

As a result, Brosius appointed a committee of 22 state farmers this week to investigate the development of a producer-funded program to promote Pennsylvania's corn production.

Under the state Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968, a group of interested citizens may petition the ag secretary to consider a proposed program to promote and/or fund research for specific commodities.

Similar marketing and research programs exist for apples, dairy, peaches and nectarines, potatoes, and other commodities.

For more corn news, in this issue, Lancaster Farming publishes PMCGA's Corn Talk, a special section dedicated to the corn grower. Corn talk is published three times per year. Included in this section are reports on the corn production year in Pennsylvania, the uses of narrow-row corn, controlling burcucumber in corn, on-farm interviews, research information, and advertising messages.

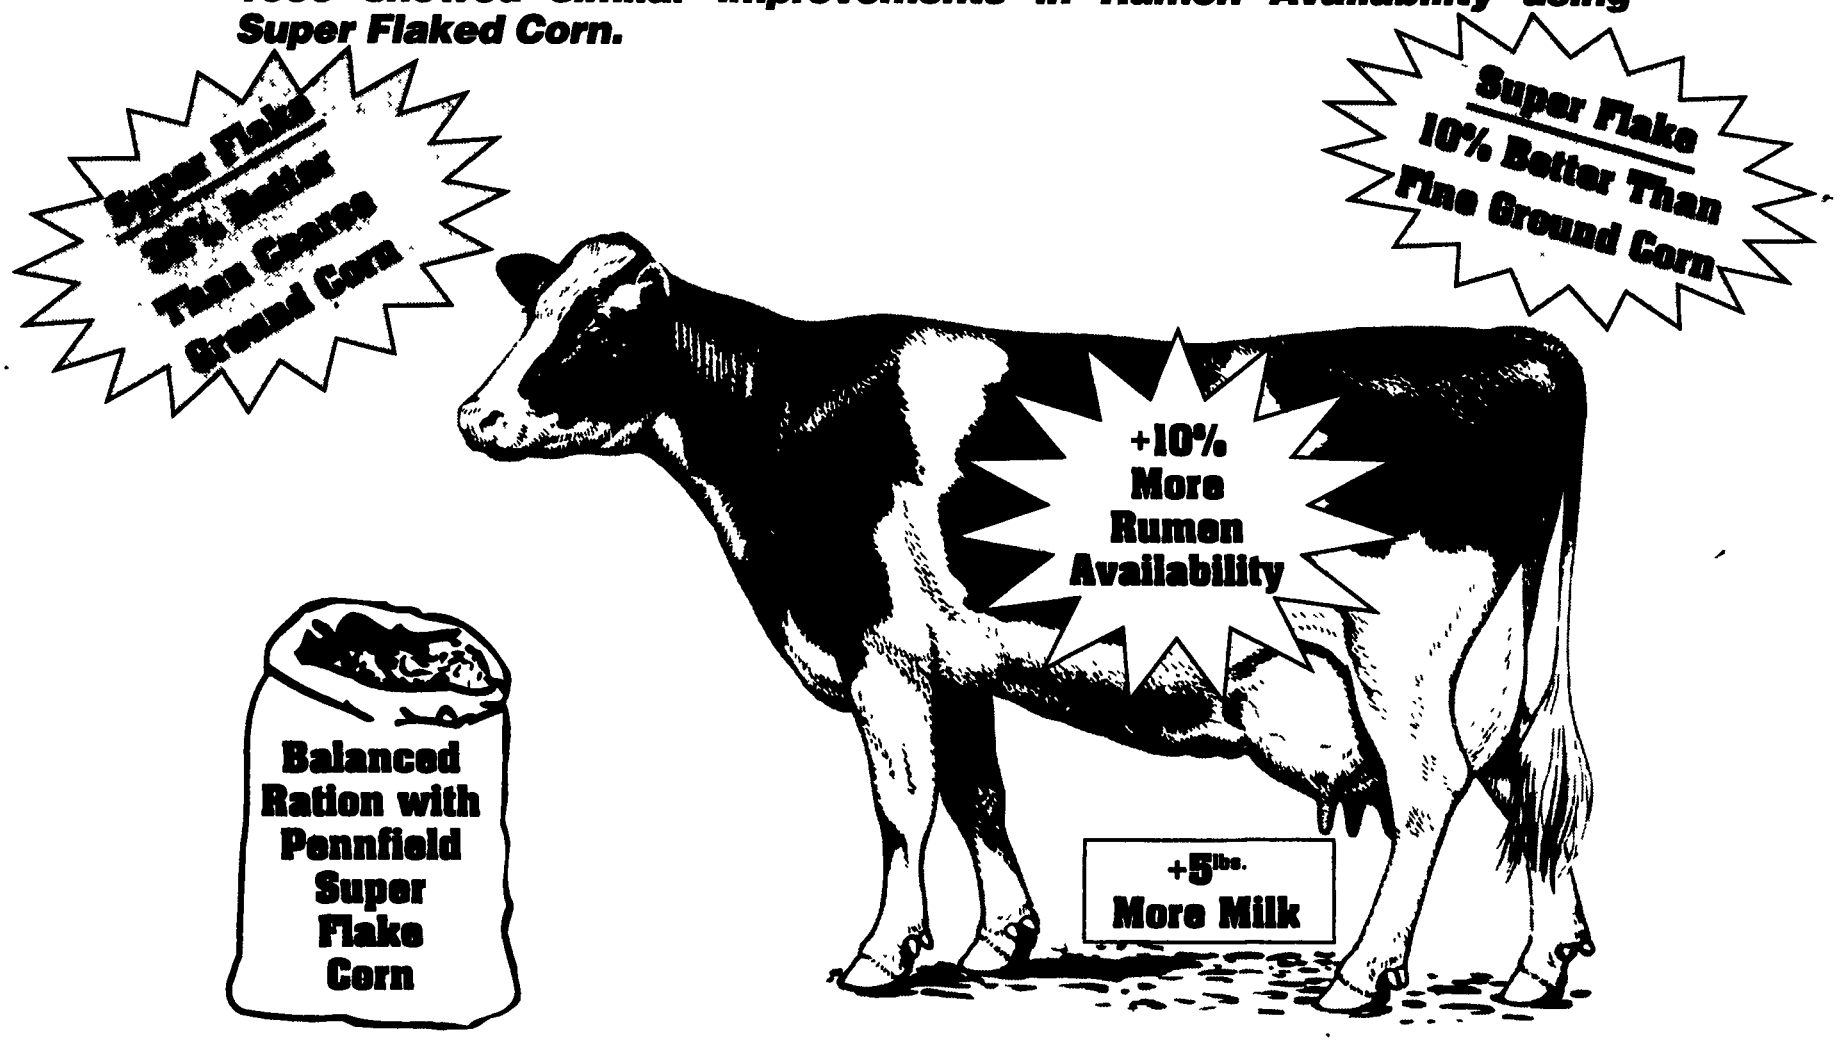
#1 Pennfield's Super Flaked Corn #1

Super Flake is #1 in Rumen Availability

A summary presented at the 1992 Florida "Large Herd Management Conference" by Dr. David Mertens of the U.S. Forage Lab gave the following results:

Corn Processing	% Ruminal Digestion
Dry, Coarse Grind	65%
Dry, Medium Grind	74%
Dry, Fine Grind	78%
High-Moisture Ensiled, Coarse	82%
High-Moisture Ensiled, Fine	85%
Steam Flaked, Thin Flake	86%

More proof! Pennfield sponsored experiments at two universities in 1995 showed similar improvements in Rumen Availability using Super Flaked Corn.



WHY IS SUPER FLAKED CORN BETTER?

Flat rolled steam flaking disrupts the cellular structure of the corn kernels (gelatinization) and increases sites for microbial attachments resulting in improved starch (carbohydrate) digestion in the rumen. In simple terms, the cow uses more of the nutrients because the rumen bugs can get to them and much less corn nutrient goes out in the manure.

Delmarva Broiler

OCTOBER 9, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was generally light and unaggressive. Seller offerings were available and excess product was often noted as slow to clear. Live supplies were moderate to heavy; weights varied in a full range of light to heavier than desired. Processing schedules were moderate to heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were unchanged at 57 to 71 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to weak. In the parts complex, all items were at least adequate. Leg items were in best balance. Breast cuts and wings were readYly available, and buyers generally opted to await further market developments prior to making commitments.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

COLUMBUS DAY, OCT. 14.

AMERICA'S FIRST LEXICOGRAPHER

October 16 marks the birthday, in 1758, of Noah Webster, author of the first American dictionary. Webster made his living as a lawyer, journalist, and school teacher, but we tend to remember him for the many words he folded into the Compendious Dictionary of the English Language, published in 1806, and, in 1828, the American Dictionary of the English Language. In 1783 his American Spelling Book appeared, which first Americanized the English spelling of such words as "colour" and "labour" by dropping the u. Webster wrote his dictionaries in longhand.

Words are good but hens lay eggs.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Apple peelings should be included in cooking apple jelly, for that's where most of the pectin is stored.

CRAB APPLE JELLY

3 pounds crab apples, washed and cut, but not cored or peeled water, to cover
1 cup sugar to each cup of strained juice (about 4 cups, more or less)

Boil crab apples in water until soft. Wet jelly bag and strain crab apples through this. (For clear jelly, do not squeeze bag.) Have sterilized jelly jars ready, dry but hot. Measure the juice, then simmer in a stainless steel pot for 5 minutes. Skim froth, then add sugar. Simmer about 10 minutes, until jelly thickens and drops from a spoon in sheets (about 220° F). Skim foam and pour jelly into sterilized jars, to within 1/2 inch of top if topping with paraffin (use 1/8 inch of wax), or to within 1/8 inch of top for two-piece metal jar tops. Seal, cool, and store in cool, dark, dry place.

Makes about 4 cups.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

No rain on St. Gallus Day (Oct. 16); a dry spring will come.

Look for a cold winter when the apple peels are thicker than usual.

A field requires three things: fair weather, sound see, and a good husbandman.

OK City Feeder Cattle

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK
OCTOBER 9, 1996

Compared to last Monday: Feeder steers and heifers steady to 1.00 higher. Demand very good for feeders. Steer and heifer calves steady to 2.00 higher, most advance on heavier weight steer calves and plainer heifer calves. Calf demand good with considerable improvement on heifers. Quality plain to average, few attractive calves. Large supply of thin Brahman cross feeders with no discounting despite the fall season. This indicating good demand from Texas feedlots. Feeder cattle in medium to thin flesh; calves medium to fleshy conditions. Weigh-ups average to full. Weather perfect last week for planting wheat. State is approximately 2/3rds planted through today. Slaughter cows and bulls steady. Packer demand moderate with all areas participating but Texas buyers most aggressive. Country buyers continue to gather nearly all the thin young cows and bred cows under 7 years old for winter grazing. 840 cows and bulls sold with 65 percent to packers. To Control Combine Fires

Cutting corners on combine maintenance may spark a disaster — a combine fire.

About 75 percent of all combine fires start in the engine area, warns Howard Doss, Michigan State University extension farm safety specialist.

Electrical malfunctions, hot exhaust gases, and frictional heat from bearings and belts are the most common causes. As a precaution, check your combine's electrical components before harvest and during each week of harvest. Make sure battery terminal connections are tight. Make sure all exhaust manifold and muffler connections are tight.

Check all belts and bearings. Belts may catch fire if they start slipping. Worn bearings may glow red hot before they fail. Clean your combine engine once each season with a high pressure sprayer and degreasing solvent.

Quickly shut down the engine if you suspect a fire. Turn the key completely off. Mount a 10-pound ABC type dry chemical fire extinguisher near the cab. You may want a second one outside the cab that can be reached from the ground.

In event of a fire, attack the fire from upwind. Aim the extinguisher at the base of the flames, not at the flames. If the fire is beyond your control, go for help immediately, do not endanger yourself.

To Time Last Cutting Of Alfalfa

One of the key considerations in planning the last cutting of alfalfa is the impact it will have on winter survival, according to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent.

The shortening day length and cooler temperatures tell the winter hardy varieties of alfalfa to develop cold resistance. During this hardening process, plants reduce top growth and increase the amounts of carbohydrates they store in their roots.

Winter survival and spring regrowth are dependent on having adequate amounts of carbohydrates stored by the plant in the fall. Harvesting alfalfa at the wrong time in the fall may cause the plant to use some of the stored carbohydrates to make new fall growth. This will reduce the amount available for winter survival and spring re growth.

This consideration has led to the traditional recommendation not to harvest in the four- to six-week period before the first killing frost. However, new alfalfa varieties have helped to eliminate some of the problems of winter kill.

It is now felt that the length of time since the previous harvest is more important than the actual date of the harvest. If it has been at least 45 days since the previous harvest, further delay of harvest is not necessary.

To Manage Alfalfa For Winter Survival

Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, reminds us good management may improve winter survival of alfalfa.

In addition to proper timing of last cutting, other management considerations to help improve winter survival of alfalfa include maintaining good soil fertility and proper pH. This will help to reduce stress and increase winter survival.

Planting the most disease-resistant variety available that also has a high yield potential when seeding will help with survival. Remember, even with the best management possible, weather conditions some seasons are not conducive to maintaining alfalfa stands.

◆FARM FORUM◆

I'm writing to respond to your editorial Sept. 21, 1996, titled "Farmers Feed The World." Your printing of statistics from the Hudson Institute could be accurate in some parts but does not paint the whole picture.

The major factors that are destroying the world's food production potential are population growth, loss of prime farmland and soil erosion. Many organizations including the well-respected Worldwatch Institute have accurate statistics that prove this.

Every year there are almost 100 million more people to feed than the year before. Each person requires 2 to 4 acres of farmland

TRUSTING IN A LIE

TRUSTING IN A LIE
October 13, 1996
Background Scripture:
Jeremiah 28 through 29
Devotional Reading:
Jeremiah 30: 13-24

University of Pennsylvania Professor Martin E. P. Seligman has done an exhaustive study of presidential elections in the USA and determined that optimism is almost always a very strong factor in the presidents that we elect.

In his book, Learned Optimism (Knopf, 1990), Seligman says, "In the twenty-two presidential elections from 1900 through 1984, Americans chose the more optimistic-sounding candidate eighteen times." In the senatorial campaign of 1988, Seligman and his associates predicted accurately 25 of the 29 Senate races, including all the upsets and all the close races, on the basis of an analysis of the positive/negative content of the candidates' campaigns. Obviously, people do like a positive rather than a negative message.

In the long history of the Judaic/Christian faiths it has been apparent that believers also prefer a hopeful message. Jeremiah, for example, had prophesized that the people would be carried away into exile — and they were, most of them. Those who remained in Jerusalem as well as those carried away to Babylon had witnessed the terrible fulfillment of the prophecies they had rejected.

HAPPY DAYS ARE COMING!

So, they are ready for Hananiah's upbeat message: "Thus says the Lord of hosts... 'I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. Within two years I will bring back to this place all the vessels of the Lord's house, which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place...' " (Jer.28:2-4). He goes on to promise an end to the people's sufferings and Jeremiah replies that he hopes it is so. "Amen? May the Lord do so; may the Lord make the words which you have prophesized come true..." (28:5).

Other prophets, says Jeremiah, have prophesized disaster and their prophesies have been fulfilled. "As for the prophet who prophesizes peace, when the word of the prophet comes to pass, then it will be known that the Lord has truly sent the prophet" (28:9). Like everyone else, Jeremiah wanted to believe that peace was just around the corner.

But "the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah" and the message was not one of peace, but more suffering. God makes it clear that Nebuchadnezzar rules, not in spite of God, but because of him. The king of Babylon is unknowingly fulfilling God's will. So, Jeremiah turns to Hananiah and says, "Listen Hananiah, the Lord has not sent you, and you have made this people trust in a lie" (28:15).

GLADLY HEARD

In Babylon Hananiah's glowing prophesy was repeated by a colleague, Shemaiah, promising that the exile would soon be over and they would return to Jerusalem. It was a message the people wanted desperately to hear, so that we may assume that Shemaiah was gladly heard and received. If he had been running for office, he would have certainly won the race.

But Jeremiah sends a letter to his friend Zephaniah in Babylon and the latter decries Shemaiah's message as hope: "...and they have spoken in my name lying words which I did not command them" (29:23). And Jeremiah adds: "Because Shemaiah has prophesized to you when I did not send him, and has made you a trust in a lie, therefore thus says the Lord: Behold, I will punish Shemaiah..." (29:31b).

It is tempting to tell the pleasant lie instead of the hard truth. But lies, no matter how pleasant, do not bring the repentance that is necessary. Those who knowingly lie to us and paint a rosy picture when the reality is actually ominous are not prophets sent from God. And if we expect and accept their lies, are we any better than they? They may win our support but hinder our salvation.

Still, even in the darkest of prophesies there is a promise that is our only hope: "When you seek me with all your heart, I will be found by you" (29:13-14).

Each is LP or natural gas compatible and can be mounted inside or outside your confinement house.

Graded Feeder Cattle Sale Dates Announced

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius recently announced the dates for eight graded feeder cattle sales to be held around the Commonwealth during October 1996.

"Many beef cattle producers only market their calves once a year," Brosius said. "We can help local farmers by letting other producers know when graded feeder cattle sales are scheduled in their particular areas."

Personnel from the Livestock Division of the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Market Development will be on hand to grade the cattle for frame size and muscle thickness, using USDA standards. Cattle will be sold in uniform lots according to grade, weight, sex and breed. Some sales do not accept dairy cattle, cattle with horns or bulls.

been very active in youth education. The newsletter is an important source of information on the resources of the area for local citizens and officials.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER

The winner of the county commissioner district director award is Dick Rice of Bedford County. Rice has served as a commissioner director since 1987. He is driven to make Bedford County a better place to live and strives to improve the overall quality of life for all citizens.

As chairman of the Evitts Creek Steering Committee, Rice has helped to develop a watershed project to help protect the city of Cumberland, Maryland's public drinking water supply and to increase recreational opportunities on city-owned land.

SPECIAL AWARD

The special conservation award is presented to Richard VanNoy, Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). VanNoy developed appreciation for the values of conservation as a dairy farmer in Bradford County. In 1966 he joined the state conservation commission and assisted Pennsylvania's conservation districts establish and implement soil conservation programs. At the time there were few district staff and VanNoy spent a lot of time on the road helping to spread the news of conservation to prospective cooperators.

In more recent years, VanNoy's expertise led him to represent the DEP on both the Agricultural Land Condemnation Approval Board and the Agricultural Land Preservation Board. He was also instrumental in the organization of the Agricultural Advisory Board to the DEP. He has always had a special interest in environmental education and was a force behind many of the state's early education efforts.

VanNoy may be best known for his management of the conservation district fund allocation program which is used to cost-share the employment of conservation district staff and provide administrative assistance to conservation districts. The program was initiated in 1967 with an allocation of $15,000. With his help and management, the program has grown to $2,750,000.

outstanding and long-term volunteer service in conservation. This year the award is presented to James Gemmell III, from Bucks County. Gemmell has 45 years of service to Pennsylvania's conservation efforts especially through the Bucks County Conservation District. In 1952 when the Buckingham Farmers Cooperative with Gemmell a founding member, initiated the move to establish a conservation district in Bucks County, he joined the endeavor. The quest to get the idea through the legislature took 10 years. But on April 24, 1961, the district was formed, and he has been a vital part of the district since then, working to ensure its growth and success.

ORGANIZATION AWARD

The Western Pennsylvania Coalition For Abandoned Mine Reclamation in Westmoreland County received the conservation organization award for noteworthy contributions to the conservation of Pennsylvania's soil, water, and related natural resources. The coalition was established in 1981 to provide leadership for encouraging the reclamation, development, and best use of abandoned mine lands in the bituminous coal area of western Pennsylvania. This independent, non-profit, nonpartisan group supplements the efforts of the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, the Rural Abandoned Mine Program, and others with similar goals. The coalition encompasses 21 counties.

In recent years, the coalition began to focus attention on the abandoned mine related water quality problems. In 1994, they were awarded a three-year grant under the non-point source pollution Clean Water Act. The grant provides $900,000 in funding for mine drainage remediation efforts over the term of the grant. Designed to be implemented through the county conservation districts, the program helps institutionalize the state's acid mine drainage program. In one project, the Scrubgrass Run Water Project, just a few miles from downtown Pittsburgh, a local high school has become involved and has used the project to develop an integrated studies program related to the project and the local community.

EDUCATOR AWARD

The winner of the conservation educator award is Stephen Kline of Beaver Springs, Snyder County. The award is presented annually to teachers who have demonstrated a strong commitment to conservation education programs and activities. Kline teaches ag education at West Snyder High School for 26 years. He has also taught environmental eduation with subjects in wildlife, forestry, and water quality. He is also the adviser to West Snyder's Envirothon team.

Last year, Kline began the first West Snyder FFA Conservation Day at West Beaver and BEaver-Adams Elementary Schools. At this event the FFA members presented conservation programs to elementary students. In a special project funded by the Pennsylvania Bay Education office, the senior high FFA developed streambank fencing, headwall construction, reseading, pasture rotation, and a pasture pump livestock waterer.

MEDIA AWARD

The media conservation award is presented to individuals or professional communication organizations who have made an outstanding contribution to the public's awareness of conservation districts and to the public's understanding of natural resource conservation. This year's award was presented to Lancaster Farming.

According to the conservation associations Lancaster Farming, with its statewide reach and popularity, is a principal publication to highlight conservation practices and activities. The publication is often found in many ag businesses, banks, and ag agency offices around the state. Conservation district activities are kept before the public eye, frequently with front page coverage, pictures, and feature articles. Local papers serving the general public (both daily and weekly) regularly scan Lancaster Farming to do follow-up articles or stories of interest to their readers, thus multiplying the exposure of district activities.

Although Lancaster Farming serves the entire PACD area, it is headquartered in Lancaster County, and the Lancaster County Conservation District is proud to sponsor this year's winner.

GODDARD AWARD

This award in honor of former DER Secretary Maurice K. Goddard is presented to co-winners—William Mayberry of New Castle, Lawrence County, and Shelly Tree Farm, Thompson, Susquehanna County.

Mayberry possesses a deep dedication to public education, especially youth education on forest stewardship practices and philosophy. A Tree Farm System member for 23 years, he has used professional foresters, both public and private, as advisors and consultants when implementing silvicultural treatments and commercial timber sales. In 1992 Mayberry enrolled 208 acres in the Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program and has a forest stewardship plan developed.

The Mayberrys have permitted the use of 25 acres of their property to be developed as a demonstration woodlot. This area has been extensively used by forest ecology classes from local colleges, high school FFAs, girl and boy scout troops, farm managers and neighboring conservation districts.

The Shelly Farm is one of the oldest tree farms still in existence in the state. Originally owned and certified to Dr. and Mrs. Robert Shelly in 1967, the farm is now owned by daughter Kathy Shelly and Ed Cameron. This tree farm has been three properties. One property was deeded to the Nature Conservancy so it can be perpetually maintained as a unique ecosystem as a boreal bog. It is maintained and open to the public for study and recreation.

On the home property, the wildlife habitat is excellent, and trails are used and maintained for wildlife viewing and hiking. A small cabin has been constructed for the enjoyment of friends, family, and guests.

LEGISLATOR AWARD

State representative Ruth Rudy from the 171st district covering parts of Centre and Mifflin Counties received the legislator of the year award. Rep. Rudy has used her knowledge of conservation districts and of the value of their work to introduce, support and vote for legtislation that has benefited the conservation movement in Pennsylvania. She sought and gained House committee assignments that enable her to enforce her interest in the use of knowledge of agriculture, conservation and rural life.

She has been chair of Central Pennsylvania Caucus, vice chair of the Ag and Rural Affairs committee, and a member of the Aging and Youth, and Education committees. She has sponsored and supported legislation for the agricultural security area law and other legislation for environmental study grants, nutrient management and environmental education.

SCHOLARSHIP AWARD

The PACD auxiliary scholarship award was presented to Christopher Klinger of Wiconisco, Dauphin County. Klinger is a junior at Slippery Rock University, majoring in environmental education. He will receive a $500 scholarship.

The conference began on Sunday and continued through Wednesday noon with educational and business events as well as tours to points of conservation interest in Lancaster County.

State House Honors Dairy Farmers, Dairy Princesses

Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Promotion Program accompanied the girls and their parents and Rep. Scrimenti to the House floor, a restricted area.

The public generally has access to the gallery of the House, not the floor.

Kieklak made it a goal of hers during her term as state dairy princess to do something to honor the dairy farmer in Pennsylvania. With the support and help of Dorothy Naugle, of Allied Milk Producers, Kieklak worked with Rep. Scrimenti to draft and propose the House resolution to honor the state's dairy farmers on Oct. 7.

The legislative effort came as a result of an award-winning speech she gave as princess called the, "Unsung Hero," which describes her affection for her father and the advantages she had being the daughter of a dairy farmer.

After receiving applause and words of appreciation from legislators, Kieklak and Werley also received private audience from Gov. Tom Ridge, who managed to fit some time to meet with the princesses and their parents.

Kieklak had met Gov. Ridge previously through official ceremonies, and can be expected to meet Werley again, especially at the 1997 State Farm Show. However, Monday's reception was much more personal because it was in recognition of the House honoring Kieklak.

Kieklak's parents, Richard and Robin, said they were delighted to visit with the governor, a first for them.

In fact, it was the first time Richard had been to the Capital. Richard took his first vacation day in more than 22 years on Sept. 24 to attend the state dairy princess pageant in Harrisburg, the last official proceeding with his daughter reigning as state princess.

He took a four-day stretch of vacation then. On Monday he took one more day of vacation and got his first visit to the state Capital and his first visit with the governor.

And he got to see his daughter being honored by the state House of Representatives.

Both parents said they are very proud of their daughter, who is currently working with Sonny's Photography in Erie, a business that takes student photographs.

Rhonda said she is equally as proud of her family, which includes older sister Renee, who served as a county dairy maid in 1990.

According to Kieklak, her parents' dedication to the dairy industry and the hard, but rewarding work she witnessed her parents perform served to motivate her to seek the special day honoring dairy farmers.

"I got the idea from what my speech was last November," she said. She said that Dorothy Naugle from Allied Milk Producers, helped give her advice. "She wasn't there Monday, but she deserves recognition for her efforts working with me."

Kieklak said she sought political recognition because of the impact. "I just wanted (dairy farmers to) be recognized. I knew that if politics would be involved, it would be public."

She said she was aware of Scrimenti and at her high school graduation party, she talked to him about the day of appreciation. She said originally she intended to honor all farmers, but it was changed to specify dairy farmers, which was fine by her, as long as the other farmers don't feel they aren't appreciated by her, because they are.

The resolution passed the House by a 201-0 vote.

On Monday, while waiting along the walls of the House chamber for the legislators to settle into their places and come to order, she said she was somewhat shocked at the apparent Alice-In-Wonderland chaos that seemed to dominate.

"I was real suprised that they ever get anything done, because it was real chaotic," she said, "but when (Rep. Scrimenti) was done talking, everybody clapped, so they must have been listening."

Kieklak said the day was very exciting for her.

"It was overwhelming," she said. "There were a lot of people there — Angela Werley, Jan Harding, my parents, her parents — and we were called up to the House floor and the citation was read and presented and they recognized both Angela and I, and we had our photos taken with the speaker, and I thought it was over with and then the governor made an effort to come out."

"It's exciting," her mother said. "We're very proud of her. We're blessed. She's a great person. It's been a great year."

Richard said the experience for him was "great" and he also was very proud of her accomplishments, but not surprised.

"Usually when she starts something, she goes until its finished," he said. "If she didn't get it passed this year, she'd get it passed next year, she's very determined."

The Kieklak farm goes by the name of "Four-R Farm," a reference to the family of four and the fact that all their names begin with "R."

But it also refers to the dedication and ethic of working and sacrificing for a goal, in this case the farm.

Richard is the third generation on the farm. His grandfather started it and Richard took it over from his father.

They own 100 acres, rent 200, and milk 50 cows and have about 20 heifers, both registered and grade Holsteins.

Robin said Monday was icing on the cake.

"I would put the whole year as dairy princess as one of the best times the family had," she said. "(Monday) was like the crowning achievement."

Rhonda, who is looking to pursue a college education, said that her advice for others is not to give up when things get tough and to put a complete effort into convictions.

"If you have a dream, or you feel that your goal can be reached, put in a 110-percent effort and you can accomplish it," she said, adding that Monday was "my year's work and it kind of marked that my year was over."

But it is just the beginning of Oct. 7 as state Dairy Farmer Appreciation Day.

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Penn State University College of Agricultural Sciences' Department of Dairy and Animal Science has announced an open house for prospective students to be held Saturday, Oct. 26, at its University Park building.

According to a news release, registration and refreshments are set to start at 9:30 a.m., with the program starting at 10 a.m.

The open house is designed to provide information most often requested by college-bound students applying for admission into undergraduate programs offered in Penn States Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

The day's activities will include sessions on the dairy and animal science major, undergraduate experiences at Penn State, the admissions process, housing, financial aid, career guidance, clubs and judging teams.

After a lunch buffet, families will have the opportunity to meet with an academic advisor and tour the Penn State campus.

Those wishing to attend should call LuAnn Weatherholtz at (814) 863-3664, by Oct. 22, to make reservations for lunch.

For more information on the open house event, or programs offered in the Department of Dairy and Animal Science, call Keith Bryan at (814) 863-0569, or Dale Olver at (814) 863-3914.

for food production. The world's cities and towns are in or near fertile river valleys and areas that contain prime farmland. Prime farmland is a very small area of land when compared to all the marginal, grazing and highly erodible farmland. As the cities and towns expand prime farmland is destroyed forever. In the U.S. almost 4 square miles of prime farmland are destroyed every day, which is one-third of all land developed for roads, houses and factories. The third problem of soil erosion is more massive than most people realize. Most farmers worldwide are not practicing adequate soil conservation even though many low or no-cost best management practices (BMP's) are available. Every time there's a thunderstorm, fast rain or flood, rivers run brown and dump precious topsoil in the Chesapeake Bay, Gulf of Mexico and the world's oceans. As the topsoil layer gets thinner, yields will suffer. New seed varieties won't help much. There's a limit on solar energy and water per acre so why does the Hudson Institute expect great increases in yield?

Other factors to consider are high salinity on irrigated land and cities taking water rights from farmers.

In conclusion, let me state that a major portion of information that is heard or read is distorted or falsified for various reasons. An example of this happened before the Civil War. Literature was printed that proved that the Bible supported slavery and buying and selling of people. I hope Lancaster Farming readers have a large variety of reading materials to help them form a truer picture of the world.

Editor:

I really enjoy the L.F., especially the "B" section. It usually comes on Monday here in Western PA. Once in a blue moon it comes on a Saturday. I like to read Joyce Bupp write-ups, if anybody knows words, she does. If you don't read it, please do, it's worthwhile.

The write-ups of the past dairy princess Sat., Sept. 28, 1996, issue written by Louann Good was very good.

This is one time I was proud to live in Washington County (Western PA) to see our Beverly Robinson Minor's pictures of her being chosen dairy princess. The Robinson family was noted for having Jersey cream line milk. Her dad Roy Robinson and brother Clyde had a milk route in Charleroi where I grew up and our family had a few milk cows. I had to peddle milk to the door steps by walking. The Robinson's had a milk route with the highest paid quart of milk as it was rich Jersey cream line milk. Bev Robinson Minor's husband Sam and family live across the road of the 84 Livestock Auction and run a business known as the "Spring House." They do catering work. Have home cooked meals and bakery, and sell jug milk. Their buttermilk is the best tasting buttermilk with bits of butter. Their slogan at the store, "The Spring House," stop to see us. Want to get to know you. When I come to the store, it's usually afternoon time. I see Sam Minor, Bev's husband with his rosey cheeks looking around for a bite to eat, as he was up before breakfast doing chores, milking the moos. Also see Marsha Minor making pies, they all are hard working people.

As their past milk maids related their experiences to being chosen dairy princesses, they talked about what it did to them in their lives. They still are promoting milk. Want to end with, if you can't get ahead, use the one you have. You all take care. As parts are hard to find.

Simmental Futurity Contest At KILE

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Keystone International Livestock Exposition hosted the 1996 Pennsylvania Simmental Capital Futurity at the Farm Show Complex.

The futurity began in 1989 "as a marketing tool for other Simmental breeders," said Lee Snyder, Franklin, who with his wife Linda, organizes the event. Participants nominated the calves before February 15. Registration payments comprised the $1000 championship jackpots that more than 30 calves competed for at this year's futurity.

In addition to the higher prize money, the futurity also features "unfit" calves. Unlike other beef shows, futurity calves have no spray adhesives or clip jobs to cover faults.

"You really see the animal for what they are and what sets them apart from the rest," Snyder said.

Judges Nick Overpeck, IL, Keith Bryan, PA, and John Sticka, KY, selected "Simme Valley Finesse," exhibited by Simme Valley, Groton, NY, as grand champion heifer. "MF Miss Big Sky F42," owned by Messick Farms, Middletown, was reserve grand champion heifer.

D.T. Virts, Purcellville, VA, owned both the grand champion bull, "MHF Jet Black Bull 3019F," and the reserve grand champion bull, "Rambler MHF Bull 2028F." In the senior bull competition, "1 HWF Ebo," owned by H. Robert McQuiston, Stoneboro, was grand champion.

The judges picked "MF Miss Gunsmoke E48," exhibited by Messick Farms, as the grand champion senior heifer. Hudson Pines Farm, Tarrytown, NY, captured reserve grand champion heifer honors with "HPF Miss 438 E114."

Messick Farms, with grand champion senior heifer and reserve champion heifer, had a great day at the futurity. "This year there was exceptional quality in the animals and a lot of new faces," said Sally Messick. And the secret to Messick Farms success? "It takes a lot of hard work and never thinking you know everything. We always ask questions and learn from other people," Messick added.

Nearly 4,000 head of livestock competed for a total of $206,500 in premiums at this year's KILE, which celebrated "The Year of the Swine."

Bender Implement Company is located at 742 South Edgewood Avenue in Somerset, still on the site where brothers Al and George Bender, in 1934, started the business.

Owner Phil Hammond says Bender Implement today offers customers a tractor product line up to 215 horsepower.

The massive red CASE IH cab tractors sitting on the lot will grab your attention, whether or not, you have something specific on your mind.

Phil categorizes Bender's implement line into four groups: tillage, planting, hay and forage, and material handling.

"We carry a good inventory," he says. "We provide new and used equipment, have parts and repair service, and will do repairs in the field or in the shop." he said.

The service area, besides Somerset, saturates some five counties, crossing into neighboring Maryland to serve customers living beyond the Mason-Dixon line.

Twelve employees fill positions in management, services, sales, parts and clerical areas. The company operates with a fleet of four vehicles -- one delivery and three service trucks -- and daily uses United Parcel Service (UPS) for outbound mailings.

Bender Implement Company, as in the past, continues to carry its line of large household appliances. Only now, the brand name is no longer International Harvestor as it was in former days.

"I used to milk cows," recalls Phil, "and I put the milk into an International cooler."

Phil Hammond, owner of Bender Implement Company, stands by the muffler display at his Somerset, Pennsylvania store, located at 742 South Edgewood Avenue.

Brother, Sister Capture Market Goat Show At Manheim

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Brother and sister can often work like a team — and they did so at the Manheim Community Farm Show Wednesday afternoon, picking up grand and reserve market goat.

Chad Fisher, 9, showed "Spots," a Nubian, to grand champion market goat at the farm show. The son of Karen and John Fisher, Manheim, Chad is in the 4th grade at Doe Run School. The goat was picked from the light heavyweight division. This is his first Manheim championship.

Chad's sister, Jacee, 17, won reserve champion with her Nubian from the light heavyweight division. Jacee and her brother work on the family's Nubian farm where they care for 30 animals altogether and are gradually "building it up," said Jacee.

Show judge Dawn Camp, Welcome, Md., said the grand champion exhibited "a lot of finish over the ribs and over the shoulder."

Camp said that in picking the reserve champion, she is "looking for the finish over the ribs in particular" and was impressed by the length of the reserve champion.

Camp congratulated the exhibitors as a whole before she gave her decision. Camp said the market goats she saw at Manheim were some of the best animals "I've seen all year, in three to four different states."

A goat from the 3 years and over class that was "tremendous in body capacity and dairy character," according to Camp, won grand champion overall dairy goat Wednesday evening at Manheim. The Sonnen crossbred, Julie, was shown by Nicole Eisenhower. Nicole, 16, is the daughter of Tim and Roxanne Eisenhower, Elizabethtown.

Nicole, a junior at Elizabethtown High School, has won the Brother, Sister Capture Market Goat

Manheim grand championship before, she said. She swept the championship, picking up reserve champion with her LaMancha crossbred, Lilly, from the 1-2 year old class. Camp said the reserve was tremendous and level over the top line. Both would have won top udders in a class, according to the goat judge.

Nicole said that taking good care of the goats, feeding them well, and practice walking with the goats help them compete effectively in the show ring.

In pygmy goat competition earlier in the afternoon, Sarah Graybill showed Joy, her doe 3 years and under 4, for grand champion. Reserve champion was won by Kim Landis, with her doe 2 to under 3 years old, Dolly.

There were a total of 24 exhibitors and 50 animals. Following is a list of show placings.

Dr. Bill Heald and Dr. Lisa Holden are facilitating discussion for 24 PA DHIA employees at a customized Dairy-Map workshop.

DAVE SLUSSER
Executive Director

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The staff of PA DHIA received professional instruction on how to design our cooperative to meet the needs of the 21st Ceentury dairymen. David Bigelow, training coordinator stated, "I was inspired to develop personal goals, and realized my value as a PA DHIA team member." Our cooperative follows the team management concept in business operations. This approach provides opportunity for all employees to take responsibility for problem solving and new ideas for services to members.

The Dairy-Map Program was custom designed for PA DHIA to better serve and respond to the management needs of modern day dairy farm managers. The program was developed in cooperation with Dairy-Map, Cooperative Business Education and management of PA DHIA. The instructors were Dr. Lisa Holden, Coordinator of Dairy-Map; John Rutherford, Western Regional Coordinator of Dairy-Map; Dr. Bill Heald, Professor of Dairy and Animal Science; and Richard Poorbaugh, Program Coordinator for Cooperative Education.

The staff received insights on "Thinking Outside the Paradigm," personal goals, personality differences, time management, team building, teamwork, business management principles, controlling the business, cooperative principle and PA DHIA management structure. The workshop was also used to introducc the Mission, Vision and Strategic Long Range Plan of PA DHIA for the 21st Century.

Dave Slusser, manager, recommends other business and cooperatives that serve the agricultural industry consider a customized Dairy-Map program. It is important for employees to understand business principles and cooperative structure and have a positive effect on our farm community.

Overseeing the J & S Orchard roadside stand are Stella Richards and Dutchess. At this time of year, the Richards sell several varieties of apples from their orchard in addition to pumpkins and some of Stella's homemade jams and jellies.

Stella serves Apple Streusel Coffee Cake, which appears as the featured recipe on this week's Home on the Range page B6.

Apples Galore At J & S Orchard

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

PRICETOWN (Berks Co.) — Three acres with 500 apple trees might not sound like much compared to some orchards. But what J & S Fruit Farm lacks in size, it makes up in quality.

Elsewhere, it would be difficult to find as many baskets of blemish-free apples as those sold at the roadside stand located along the winding Pricetown Road.

Jim and Stella Richards operate the orchard begun by Jim's parents in the 1950s. Peaches, nectarines, and black and red raspberries are also harvested on the farm.

From the beginning, it has been a do-it-yourself operation. Jim's parents lived in a shed on the 20-acre property while they built their house. For many years, the shed was used for hay and equipment storage. Since then, the shed has been added to and revamped to accommodate the apple business. The changes were made not by professionals but by the Richards themselves.

At almost every turn in the warehouse, words describing the operation is sprinkled with phrases such as "Jim devised this" or "we built this walk-in cooler ourselves."

The operation is proof that one doesn't need to invest in expensive equipment to run a successful business. The Richards do not wax the apples, but the apples are put through a brushing machine that gives them a glossy shine. The same machine is also used to defuzz peaches during the peach season.

While the Richards' setup is not as mechanized as many other orchards, it's been an opportunity to develop creative improvisions instead of investing in expensive machinery.

A prime example of this improvisation is seen as Stella sorts apples that run along the conveyor belt. She deftly rolls the seconds down a chute, which in previous years was the children's sliding board.

Much of the challenges that the Richards deal with is not noticeable to onlookers.

"I've always been a private person who likes my space," Stella said.

In the beginning, meeting people who stopped to buy at the roadside stand was a big enough intrustion on her privacy. But, demanding much more fortitude was the need to market the apples to retailers.

"Growers need to develop their own markets," Stella said of coming to terms with accepting what she considered an unpleasant aspect of the orchard business.

"When the children were small, I packed them up with baskets of apples and we hit all the grocery stores in the Reading area. I remember the children hanging out the car windows when I returned and being disappointed if a store did not buy any," Stella said.

Few small grocery stores remain. The Richards are pleased to have established some markets with the larger stores so that intensive marketing is no longer required.

The Richards are grateful for the advice the county agent for Penn State Extension gave them to operate a successful orchard. Because Stella believes in the extension services, she has been an extension board member for about six years.

Jim has always had an off-farm job in addition to farming. About 15 years ago, the Richards stopped raising steers, turkeys, pigs and crops to concentrate on the apple business.

It's a full-time job for Stella, which doesn't end with the apple harvest. The Richards have apples to sell until the end of December, but that doesn't mean work in the orchard ceases. In January, she is out in the snow and cold, pruning the trees. The average tree lasts about 25 years, after that, the apples start to deteriorate, she said.

Growers must wait four to five years for young trees to bear fruit and eight to nine years to become profitable.

In June and July, Stella works at thinning the crop by hand picking off clumps of apples.

"If too many apples are left on a tree, the fruit is smaller and spray doesn't reach all the apples," Stella said of the need to thin the crop.

The crop is sprayed periodically to prevent mite problems and other diseases by insects. Scab is spread from mold spores present on leaves on the ground. Fruit can develop bruises, blemishes and other defects from poor growth or rough handling.

Red and Gold Delicious are the biggest apple varieties for the Richards because many people still think Red Delicious apples are the best. Other varieties include Jonathan, Jonagolds, Winesap, Old Stayman, MacIntosh, Granny Smith, and Arkansas Blacks.

Apple trees require pollination. Previously, the Richards had a beekeeper bring in bees during the blossoming season, but now they have four hives set up on the property.

"Having our own bees results in a much better crop. And it's been a real education," Stella said.

Now, the couple need to deal with the mite problems that attack bee hives, which is a frustrating concern for beekeepers. Dandelion and pussy willow blossoms compete for the bees' attraction to apple blossoms.

In extracting honey, the couple have ended up with bee stings but have learned to take it all in stride.

Recently, Stella has become intrigued with making beeswax candles and ornaments. She uses candy molds to form the melted wax.

Stella is a board member of the Penn State Cooperative Extension of Berks County and also on its Family Living Committee for the past six years. She is also treasurer of the women's group at her church.

Jim is purchasing agent for a heating and plumbing company. He is also the pump authority for Reading. Every February, he teaches pump school at the vo-tech center.

This year, the Richards took some time off to participate in a Farm and Ranch Tour in Oregon. They were fascinated with the different types of farming done in Oregon.

The Richards have three adult daughters and three grandchildren. Because two of the grandchildren live in Las Vegas, they visit their grandparents for one month during the summer.

National 4-H Week Celebrates Achievements

Four-H Salutes Sara Strickler

Sara participates in Manheim Farm Show Lead Line competition, where she is judged for her outfit, which promotes wool, her modeling skills, her ability to handle a sheep, and her sheep's appearance. Sara received second place out of eight contestants in the senior category.

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — National 4-H Week, celebrated from Oct. 6-12, highlights the accomplishments of its members.

Sara Strickler of Quarryville is one of those members whose lives have been shaped by 4-H involvement.

When asked how 4-H has affected her life, she exclaimed, "It's affected my life in every way."

The 17-year-old went on to elaborate on some of those ways by saying, "When I was eight years old, I was afraid to talk in front of others. Four-H taught me public speaking skills."

She's traveled to Oklahoma and Arizona and established lasting friendships as part of the 4-H Exchange Club.

Next month Sara and another member Gerald Boyd will represent Lancaster County 4-H by flying to the National 4-H Congress held in Nashville from Nov. 29-Dec. 5.

The Congress is a reward of sorts for a select group of members on their accomplishments over the years. While there, members will not compete with each other but participate in seminars and go sight-seeing.

Sara said that she has participated in every project offered by the Solanco Community 4-H Club, which provides hands-on educational programs and activities.

One of the projects she pursues with diligence is caring for her sheep.

"It's taught me lots of responsibility," Sara said of raising both market lambs and breeding sheep. Showing, blocking, and fitting are skills learned only through doing again and again.

One of the side activities of sheep raising is participating in lead line competitions. This requires not only showing off the sheep's best qualities but also modeling wool outfits. Participants are judged on appearance, poise, modeling skills, in addition to the smooth handling of the sheep and the sheep's appearance. This week, Sara took second place in the senior division of the Manheim Farm Show Lead Line.

Previously, Sara raised hogs but she switched to sheep because "sheep are easy to work with and I like lambing," she said.

Sara keeps about 12 Dorsets and Hampshires on her uncle's farm.

She said that she is in charge of every aspect of the sheep. In 1995, Sara received the Novice Shepherd Award of the Year Award and top scrapbook. On the sheep show circuit, Sara has shown champion Dorset and Hampshire ewes and won blocking and fitting contests at Lampeter twice.

Although Sara participates in sewing and cooking clubs and is a 4-H ambassador and teen leader, her sheep are the most important to her.

Her favorite 4-H event has been 4-H State Days held annually at Penn State. This year Sara participated in livestock judging at State Days. Other years, public speaking qualified her for state competition.

Of all her 4-H projects, Sara loves her sheep the best. Here she prepares one for showing.

Over the years, the whole Strickler family has been involved in 4-H. Her sister Amy has participated in almost every activity. Sara's mom Dottie is a 4-leader. Her dad Sam had helped with a 4-H beekeeping club for several years. The Stricklers have 125 hives, mostly in Bradford County.

A senior at Solanco High School, Sara serves as president of both her school FFA and the county FFA.

Lifelong Nurturing — A Couple's Challenge

I've been looking forward to October's arrival. This month my husband and I celebrate our fifth wedding anniversary. We've planned a few get-away days when we can be alone and relax. But we don't limit our couple time to a once-a-year event. We've adopted two practices that keep our marriage growing throughout the year. Maybe you've discovered similar ones.

The first thing we do is plan "for specials." These are dates (maybe as short as an hour) that we plan when we haven't had much time to slow down and care for one another. Somtimes we do fancy things like go out to dinner. Other times, we light candles at home or watch the sunset from a quiet spot. "For specials" don't necessarily cost a lot of money. They do take commitment. We write them in red on the calendar and consider the time non-negotiable.

My husband created the other practice. He calls it "marriage maintenance." These are the things he does out of love and obligation to me that he's not really fond of. It might be a weekend with my friends (people he doesn't really know) or it could be an event that doesn't strike him as terribly interesting. He participates because he knows I enjoy it and want him to be there, too.

"Marriage maintenance" times and "for specials" are ways that we've managed to carve out time for one another. Depending on your family's stage, finding couple time may seem nearly impossible! Last week I talked with a father of four elementary school-aged children. His children are scattered across three schools; his wife works several part-time jobs. He works out of his home in addition to a full-time job in town. How do they find couple time?

He said, "We make appointments. I do that for everyone else. And my marriage is more important than any of those other meetings." Research and history document that children can easily monopolize a family's time and money, making the parents' challenge to find time for one another even more difficult.

Patricia Kramer, author of The Dynamics of Relationships, writes that "Marriage is a sense of connectedness that comes from problems met and resolved, crises that have been overcome and struggles, loses and victories that have been shared. So marriage is a caring, sharing, trusting companionship that requires lifelong nurturing."

"Lifelong nurturing," that's the challenge. Kramer summarized the research on strong successful marriages. In her chapter on making marriage last, she provides these directives to couples:

• Spend time together and time alone. Don't take your partner for granted. "After we hook the love of our lives, we somehow think we no longer have to impress each other... Too often, partners become sloppy about their appearance and they stop doing all the nice, considerate and loving things they used to do. Familiarity can become the enemy," Kramer comments.

• All marriages have peaks and valleys. People do too. Be patient with one another. Practice compromise. Deal with conflict when it occurs rather than allowing it to simmer for hours or days.

• Remember special occasions that are important to your partner. Give flowers or tokens of your affection on those days but also on ordinary days just to say, "I love you."

• Do an activity that you enjoy together at least once a month. Once a week is better. Choose something that gets you away from crowds, phones, and the children. Be creative. Don't do the same thing each time. Play together. Try some child-like activities. Allow silliness to brighten your days. Laugh together, and laugh often.

• Don't allow children to steal away couple time. The best thing any parent can do to raise healthy, loving children is to be a good role model. Children who see their parents giving affection, respect, and support instead of neglecting on another will grow up healthy and happy.

• No matter what else has happened, make a practice to check in with one another daily. Discuss the day's events-good and bad. Talk about what you're thinking and feeling.

Amazing Apple Dishes

While some varieties of apples are best for eating fresh, others are best for pies, or sauce or baking. Most apples can be eaten fresh or canned, frozen or dried for later use. Because so many new varieties are being introduced into the market, it's difficult to keep track of what varieties are best for cooking or eating fresh. If you have questions, ask for information wherever you buy your apples. Most roadside stands and supermarkets have up-to-date information.

When purchasing apples, look for bright color, full flavor, firmness, and lack of bruises.

Here are some of our readers' favorite recipes to keep you busy cooking and eating.

This is the season to enjoy the apple harvest. Although not as plentiful this year, apples are beautiful and tasty. Whether using raw or in cooking, apples have endless possibilities.

Try this recipe, which is one of Stella's favorites. It's a great dish to serve guests.

It caught me by surprise. The early October frost.

C'mon, you say, you really ought to know better. After the cool, damp summer, simple logic says the fall chill--no, make that cold--would show up earlier than "normal." Whatever that is anymore.

But, see, I kept hoping. Hoping that the welcome, late-September visit of warm, sunny, dryness would hang around a few more days. That it would ripen up a few more of those dwindling, last tomatoes. Nudge the fattening buds of the chrysanthemums into color. Redden a few more of the jalepeno peppers.

Even when I had crawled out of the cozy warmth of the car the evening before, returning home from a distant meeting, and was slapped in the face by the brisk night temperature, I really hadn't suspected it. That did send me hustling to close the greenhouse door, though, which had been left standing wide open for ventilation from the day's earlier sunshine.

Even when I headed to the barn before daylight, having snuggled into my favorite downy vest over a couple of other layers, the frost possibility had eluded my brain. Weather forecasters were calling for it by nightfall, leaving some daytime hours to gather in, cover up, tuck away those tender plants.

But no. Returning to the house after helping to switch the milking string of cows, there it was. The early morning flood of sunlight over the distant trees sparkled and danced off the white dusting, highlight it, showing it off. A white dusting across the dead grass of the lawn. Over the tops of the round bales lined up below the pond.

After calf chores, I made the rounds of the garden, assessing damages. Actually, there seemed to be few, but this dusting, this warning, would force facing the inevitable.

The tomatoes had peaked weeks ago, though stragglers on a steady basis were keeping us in sandwiches and salads. Now, at mid-morning, the top leaves of the tired stalks hung limp and slightly darkened. I gather several handfuls of orange and yellowish tomatoes, most of them of rather small size.

My pair of peppers plants had mostly escaped the light chilling. But the impending one predicted by nightfall would finish the job. Another couple of handfuls of green peppers went into the basket. The single plant of jalepenos hung heavy with both red-ripe and still-green hot peppers. While we didn't really need all those mouth burners, I couln't bear to see them just hang on the stalk and be wasted.

Several more handfuls of garden salvage went into the basket.

Marigolds, tough as they are, had shrugged off their goosebumps and remained their perky, yellow-bloomed selves. But centers of the zinnias were already disfigured, their inner petals darkened and transparent-looking. And the bright red, green, and white leaves of the row of caladiums hung limply to the ground.

I'd fitted the greenhouse with a new innerlining of plastic just days before, in anticipation of this day. So, back into shelter from their vacationing spots on porches went pots of assorted tender plants. Cacti, ferns, and the Norfolk Island pine that does double-duty during the Christmas season as our holiday tree. Hanging baskets of spider plant and Swedish ivy. Planters of impatiens covered with blooms. And probably some bugs along with it all.

All this done with an extra hustle in our step, due both to the urgency and trying to keep warm. And though we feel a little more prepared, I'm never quite mentally ready to part with the fruits and the greenery of the growing and gardening season. Good thing I'm not in charge of turning off the heat.

But, there's an up side to everything. Few things look better to a gardener than limp, black, dying weeds.

Farewell. And good riddance.

SAFE FOOD FOR YOUR FAMILY

Most of us like to use family recipes passed down through many generations, but some of these recipes present a potential disaster for our family's health. Learning how to evaluate recipes before trying them is an important part of ensuring food safety. The following guidelines will help you know which recipes to avoid or modify.

Avoid recipes containing raw eggs such as ice cream or uncooked desserts. Usually, salmonella food poisoning results from contaminated food that has been improperly handled or not cooked thoroughly. Salmonella enteritidis, however, is an unusual strain that has been found in the ovaries of infected laying hens. Because the hens transmit the organism to the egg yolk before the shell forms, we can no longer assume that a clean, uncracked egg is safe to eat. Although the risk of getting salmonellosis is relatively small, the infection can be life-threatening for certain people — especially the very young, the elderly, pregnant and nursing women. Another segment of the population at high risk are immune compromised — HIV and AIDS, chemotherapy and other illnesses requiring strong medications. Thorough cooking is necessary to destroy the salmonella bacteria. Typical recipes to avoid that use raw or lightly cooked eggs are: homemade ice cream, homemade pasta, homemade eggnog, custard sauce, homemade mayonnaise, undercooked scrambled or soft boiled eggs, and lightly cooked French toast.

Below are suggestions to follow when examining your recipes. When making homemade ice cream select a recipe that uses a cooked base or make your recipe using pasteurized eggs found in the refrigerator case at the supermarket. When making pasta at home; limit air drying time to 30 minutes, store in the freezer to prevent mold growth and cook thoroughly before serving. Stop making mayonnaise and eggnog unless you are using pasteurized eggs. Only serve eggs that are completely cooked including recipes for French toast (baking in the oven is a convenient method).

Remember when you marinate meats, fish and/or poultry to do so in a covered container in the refrigerator. Don't exceed 24 hours in the marinade solution and cook immediately. The leftover marinade should not be used to baste the meat at the table unless it is completely cooked since the raw meat was soaked in it. Discard any leftover marinade. Follow safe meat cooking methods. Avoid low oven temperatures. Temperatures below 325°F allow the center of the meat product to be in the danger zone (40° - 140°F) long enough for bacteria to grow. Always cook meat thoroughly. Thorough cooking is needed to kill harmful bacteria that may be present in raw animal products. From a safety standpoint, hamburger that is red in the middle and steak and roast beef that are rare or medium-rare are undercooked. Cook red meat to 160°F. Cook poultry to 180°F. Use a meat thermometer to check that it's cooked all the way through. For a visual check, red meat is done when it's brown or gray inside. Poultry juices run clear. Fish flakes witih a fork.

Those special starters for "friendship" cakes and breads and the bread starters should be stored in the refrigerator to prevent mold growth or fermentation. Unrefrigerated storage increases the possibility that undesirable microorganisms will ruin the yeast cells in the starter. Cold storage doesn't harm the yeast; it slows down the rate at which the yeast reproduces so it is less likely to disintegrate and become useless. Starter that is not likely to be used for several weeks should be frozen. Before using, thaw starter in refrigerator overnight, stirring occasionally. When completely thawed, set starter in covered container at room temperature for 24 hours to promote growth of the starters.

These are only a few examples or ways handed down recipes might pose a hazard to your family's well being. Look closely at all recipes before using them to check for food safety issues. If you have doubts about your recipe, call your local cooperative extension office and ask to speak to the food safety expert in their office.

KILE Provides Fun For Youth

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Along with the beef cattle, swine, sheep and horse shows, the Pennsylvania Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) provides a lot of opportunities for youth to have fun.

For some kids, of course, bringing a show animal and helping to prepare it for the show ring and meeting other kids with similar interests is plenty of fun.

But even for those with plenty to do to have fun, there are different ways to have fun at KILE, such as throwing a part of a bale of straw, pushing a small wheelbarrow with a pumpkin in it, or competing in a pedal tractor pulling contest.

There are lots of different animals to see at KILE and while it would be nice to be able to pet them, most are not for touching, since they are supposed to be busy getting ready for the show ring. But at KILE, there is a petting zoo, with small pigs, a calf, baby lambs, and ducklings walking up a ramp to eat food and jump in the water.

There are also chicks hatching under a heat lamp.

In the annual tractor pedal pull contest, there were six different ages in competition, from age 3 to age 8.

John Brigich, 8, son of Mark and Andra Brigich, of Canonsburg, tried his hand at the tractor pedal contest for the first time this year and won!

Brigich was at KILE, along with his parents who said they wanted to visit the show to see how the sheep shows were done. They have some Shropshire sheep, along with 200 grade Holsteins they milk on their 800-acre farm. John's father Mark said that next year they are going to show sheep at KILE.

While they were walking around, looking at all the animals, John was able to enter the tractor pulling contest, which is open to any youth aged 8 or less.

It was the first time John entered a pedal tractor pulling contest, but he has one at home and rides it all the time. Sometimes at home, he rides on the big tractor with his father, but mostly he rides his own pedal tractor, and he has lots of hills to ride up and down.

His father competes in tractor pulling contests sometimes, and in August he won the stock tractor pulling contest at the Washington County Fairgrounds. The first time he tried it, he pulled the weight the entire length of the course. The second time, he didn't get quite as far, but ended up 90 feet beyond the second place finisher.

John had an equally good pull with the pedal tractor, taking it the entire length of the course.

Katie Nolt, 7, daughter of Gene and Charlene Nolt, of New Holland, tried the pedal pull for the first time too, and she went 44 feet, also winning.

But mostly, just being able to have fun at KILE was the most important thing. There is always an official "winner" for every contest, but everyone who participates wins because they have fun.

KILE TRACTOR PEDAL PULL

AGE 3: 1.Brandon Carr; 2.Freddie Frey.
AGE 4: 1.Abby Benninghoff; 2.Angel Bollinger; 3.Kara Kingsley.
AGE 5: 1.Ben Bard; 2.Tyler Yost; 3.Ben Weinbrecht.
AGE 6: 1.Ronnie Ferguson; 2 Chad Waltersdoff; 3.Any Matlock.
AGE 7: 1.Kate Nolt; 2.Carl Rudy.
AGE 8: 1.John Brigich; 2.Jeff Askey; 3.Harrison Frantz.

Emily Hunter, daughter of Frank and Barbara Hunter, of Cassadaga, N.Y., throws a bale of straw in the KILE Ag Olympics. Her parents shows Dorset sheep.

Andy Matlock, son of Tim and Ellen Matlock, of Ohio, shows his trophy and ribbon he receives from John Eaton, with Lebanon Valley National Bank, for winning his age class in the KILE Ag Olympics hay bale toss contest.

John Brigich shows his winning KILE tractor pedal pulling technique. He and his father are both tractor pulling champions this year.

Katie Nolt, daughter of Gene and Charlene Nolt, of New Holland, pedals her way to victory.

Wooly Fashions Parade At Manheim Farm Show

First-place winner in the male division is Radell Peters, who models a rugby sweater his mother made while attending sheep competitions during the fall season.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Manheim Lead Line added a whole new category to the competition this year — boys. In previous years, boys competed right along with the girls in garnering points for modeling wool fashions and for sheep handling. But this year, competition was broken into three categories — junior, senior, and male categories.

Carrying a shepherd's crook, Radell Peters led a troop of four male contestants around the show ring at the Monday night competition. Radell modeled a handknit wool sweater, wool slacks, and a wool beret. His sheep, Stitch, wore a matching wool beret.

Radell's mother knit her son's sweater while attending sheep shows throughout the county. Visitors to sheep show events watched as the handspun wool was transformed into a handsome raglan, rugby sweater with a bold navy blue and white horizontal stripe.

A seventh grader at Mt. Calvary Christian School and church youth group, Radell, Middletown, said that he loves sheep, which are a big part of his life.

Taking the senior division lead was Kathy Musser, a former winner at the annual competition. She modeled a slightly flared brown and blue plaid dress with 19 covered buttons. Her lamb, Lebon, means love in German. Kathy is the daughter of Ken and Linda Musser of Mt. Joy and is a sophomore at Mt. Calvary Christian School.

The junior division winner was Amy Haines, who modeled a long rust-colored vest with coordinated plaid walking shorts handmade by her mother. Amy led her sheep Mary around the ring. Although only a sixth grader at Manheim Elementary School, Amy often gives demonstrations on spinning and weaving wool.

Other winners included Sara Strickler, second-place in the senior division. Sara modeled a cranberry and plum wool plaid outfit with a black vest and matching beret. Sara is FFA secretary for both her school and the county.

Third-place senior winner was Rochelle Newcomer. The 14-year-old daughter of Paul and Eileen Newcomer wore a black wool jacket and straight houndstooth wool skirt. Rochelle led her Suffolk named Mr. Fred to victory. Rochelle is 4-H member for six years and is an eighth grader at Kraybill's Mennonite School.

Second place in the junior division went to Ashley Funk. The fifth grader modeled wool plaid pants, vest, and a coordinated corduroy jacket. Her lamb wore coordinating neck and leg wraps. She is the daughter of Scott and Celeste of Millersville.

Third place in the junior division was won by Katye Allen of Manheim. Wearing a plaid outfit with matching beret, Katye led her Cheviot named Easter Bunny around the ring. The daughter of Keith and Kendy Allen, Katye is also known for pony riding and showing off the family's Chincoteague pony.

Michael and Richard Musser placed second and third respectively in the boys' competition. Michael wore a navy wool sweater, putty-colored pants, and navy beret. His lamb wore a matching bow tie.

Richard wore a gray, blue, and maroon sweater with coordinated hat made by his mother. His lamb Hyacinth sported a long tie.

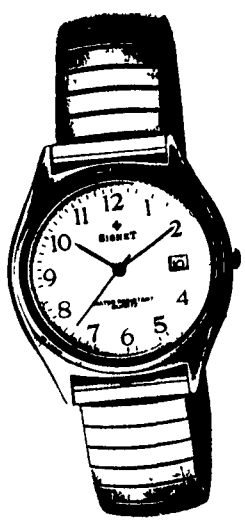
WORK WATCH



The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods. Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned. Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming.

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment you will put it through. The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out. Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt. While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable. Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part.

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within THREE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge. This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry. The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next three years

All Gardens Great & Small

by York Co. Horticultural Agent Tom Becker

COVER THE GARDEN WITH 'GREEN'

From April first up to September 22, Biglerville in Adams County has received 35.7 inches of rainfall which is 15.7 inches above normal. This excessive rainfall has resulted in an abnormally large amount of grass growth and ideal conditions for starting a cover crop.

Even small gardens benefit from the use of cover crops, or "green manures." Tilling, weeding, harvesting and foot traffic of most home gardens tend to destroy soil structure. Planting a cover crop is an easy way to restore soil tilth for next year's plant growth.

Cover crops are planted in vacant garden space and worked into the soil. Success requires selecting the right kind of cover crop and correct timing of seeding.

Traditional cover crops include annual ryegrass, winter rye, winter wheat, oats, white clover, sweet clover, hairy vetch, buckwheat and others. Grasses are often easier to grow. Legumes such as clover germinate more slowly and often require inoculation.

Small seeded types are more difficult to establish than large seeded types like oats and buckwheat.

Start grasses in poorly drained areas of the garden. Winter rye and ryegrass produce a very dense ground cover that shades out weeds. Oats or small seeded legumes are not as competitive with weeds. Availability of seed and cost are other important considerations.

Winter wheat, barley or rye grain can be productively started in early October and overwinter successfully

Cover crops like annual ryegrass, oats and buckwheat do not overwinter. Crops that die back in the winter are the easiest to work down when spring arrives. Perennial ryegrass and winter rye produce a massive amount of top growth in the spring and may be difficult to till under the soil surface. However, perennial grasses work best in wet areas. If this is the case, before the leaves grow too tall in the spring cut or mow back once with mower or scythe.

Annual ryegrass should be considered first for a garden cover crop. It is a vigorous grower with an extensive root system that occupies the same root zone as the garden plants. Winter rye is another good choice that is best for late planting.

To plant a cover crop, rake the garden area smooth and remove debris or large stones. Broadcast the seed according to recommended rates. Lightly rake again and water in the cover crop with your hose set at a fine mist.

Pa. Grange Selects Youth Ambassadors

NEW BLOOMFIELD — Brian Ebersole and Jennifer Campbell live by the philosophy that if you are going to be a Grange member, then you should give all you've got to the organization.

When they were junior members, both filled every officer positionat one time or another.

As members of the Youth Department, they serve on the Youth Corp. Now, they have another entry to add to their long list of Grange service.

The Grange's version of the "dynamic duo" were recently named the 1996-97 Youth Ambassadors at Youth Camp.

"I just wanted to get on court with this being my first time," Campbell, the daughter of Wayne and Debra Campbell of Perry Valley Grange, Perry County, said. "I was shocked to hear my name."

Ebersole, the son of Ray and Martha Ebersole of Community Grange, Perry County, said he looks forward to attending as many Grange functions as possible as Youth Ambassador.

"It's important for Granges to utilize the Youth Ambassadors," Ebersole said. "The only way for the Grange to grow is to talk about the Grange and get this organization's message out to the people."

In the coming year, they will participate in Grange meetings, the 1997 PA Farm Show, the royalty trip to Harrisburg, state session and the 1997 National Grange convention in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Campbell and Ebersole will do all that despite juggling busy schedules as they attend college and fulfill other Grange obligations.

Campbell, 18, will be a freshman at Clarion University this fall and will major in elementary and special education and minor in library science.

Youth Ambassadors Jen Campbell and Brian Campbell will represent the Pennsylvania State Grange.

Ebersole, 19, is a sophomore at Ursinus College and is a political science major.

Campbell and Ebersole believe college is a good place to talk about the Grange, but have reservations about starting Grange chapters on college campuses.

"It will be a good idea on campuses like Penn State where there is a bigger student body than Ursinus," Ebersole said. "But there would be a lot of planning involved with that kind of project."

"When you think of fraternities, you think of pledging and what goes on at fraternities at colleges," Campbell said. "That might encourage some but discourage others from joining."

They do, however, find it easy to talk about an organization that has given them so much in return.

"The more you do, the more you get out of it," Campbell said about the Grange. "Those people who only go to Subordinate Grange meetings aren't getting all they can out of this organization. There is so much going on that you can always keep busy."

"The lessons you learn in Grange can be applied to everyday life," Ebersole said. "The knowledge I've gained and the experiences I've had through public speaking competitions, Youth events and other activities are tremendous."

Farm Women Societies

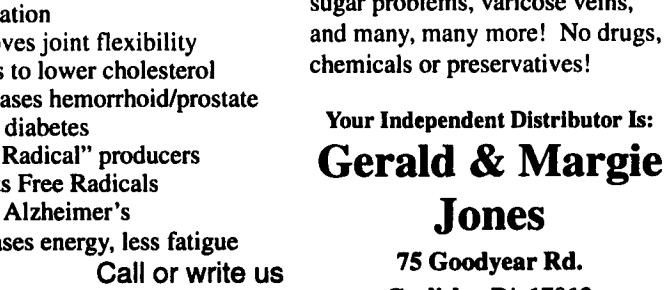
Berks Society 6

The Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 6 meeting for July was held at the home of Mary Jane Hetrick. Wendy Jesiolowski presented a program on the American FFA Degree, which she was a recipient of this year. Wendy is a graduate of Oley Valley H.S. and Delaware Valley College.

Pennsylvania Society of Farm Women awarded scholarships to Rebecca Mest, Charles Houp, and Matt Houp to further their education in agriculture. Their mothers are current members of Group 6.

Our farm women picnic was held at Mary Jane Hetrick's picnic grove in August. Good food and fellowship was enjoyed by everyone and their families.

During our August meeting at the home of Dorothy Wagner, an auction was held by members as a fundraiser. Everyone participated by bringing items from home to auction. On September 7, members supported Berks Heim's "Heim Fest" by working in their food stands. Next month the meeting will be held at the home of Karen Hoffman.



Lebanon Society 20

Lebanon County Farm Women Group 20 held their annual family picnic at the home of Howard and Vera Gross. Fifty-two attended. A covered dish meal plus hot dogs were served followed by games for the children.

The Aug. meeting celebrating "Everybody's Birthday" was held at the home of Susie Miller. Each member received a gift from her secret pal. There were games and a birthday cake and refreshments were served by the hostess.

A "Back to School Bash" was the theme for the Sept. meeting. Beatrice Mull was the hostess for the evening. Each member brought items from their school days. Prizes were given for the oldest and youngest graduate, most number of A's, most activities, and the member who looks most like her senior picture.

A new member was received into the group. Nancy DeLong became the 20th member of group 20.

Lancaster Society 14

Ellen Newswanger opened her home on July 10 to the Society #14 Of Farm Women. Dorothy Musser, Janet Leaman, and Miriam Groff were the hostesses who served delightful refreshments. Janet drew members' attention to true liberty found only in Jesus Christ in her devotional meditation. Members welcomed a new member, Jean Groff. The speaker of the day, Lois Gascho, is actively involved with Contact Lancaster Help Line, which is a 24-hour day answering service for people who need a listening ear and helpful counsel.

Every year in the month of August members gather with our spouse or friends at the Tinney Pavilion in Strasburg for a picnic. Hostesses Mary Dietzel, Helen Herr and Rhoda Landis arranged the feast of covered dishes, turkey steaks and beverages. The program was a tribute to the past by John Ramsey. Members were taken on a journey to many covered bridges. Lancaster County has 28 of the Pennsylvania's 217.

Since the CORN MAZE was on the farm of one of the society's member, members were given the opportunity to become involved for two of the days with a food stand. Farm Women raised enough money to give $150 to Hospice.

The home of Gladys Esbenshade was where the September meeting was held on Sept. 11. Anna Marie Groff and Clara Rohrer were the hostesses. Anna Marie's devotional meditation from Exodus Chapter 6 reminded us of what a faithful God we have.

"Who'll give me 5? Who'll give me 10: sold to the highest bidder" was the familiar call of the auctioneer, Ellen Newswanger. Members had great fun as we place a bid on the many items brought by members to be sold.

Events coming up this fall include Farm Women Day breakfast at Willow Valley Oct. 14, and County Convention Nov. 2 at the Farm and Home Center.

Berks Society 4

Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 4 held its September meeting at the home of Elsie Rothenberger.

President Virginia Taylor conducted the business meeting. The County Convention will be on October 5 at the Berks Agriculture Center. The group will participate in registration, silent auction, door prizes, and gift basket items. Seven members plan to attend.

Four members will assist at the home cooking school on October 3 at the Bally Fire Company.

In observance of Farm Women's Day on October 14, the group will meet at the home of Verna Taylor. Following the business meeting we will go to dinner at Red Rock in Loysville, Perry County.

During the social hour a pound auction was held.

York Society 26

York County Group 26 entertained Group 20 at Alexanders Family Restaurant on Carlisle Road in York.

Luna Kohler and Susan Anthos were in charge of the program.

Entertainment was provided by William Anthos.

A trip to Raystown Dam is scheduled for October 18.

The next meeting will be at the home of Evelyn Beshore on Wyndamere Road.

Keystone Lead Line Event Features Creativity

First place junior-aged winner in the 1996 Keystone Lead Line competition is Emma Lynn Little, who shows her winning outfit, while holding the halter of her Jacob breed yearling ewe.

The intermediate-age division champion of the 1996 Keystone Lead Line competition is Jaime Fought, who shows her outfit and yearling Dorset, Sunshine.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Creative and sensible uses of wool in apparels were displayed Saturday during the 1996 Keystone Lead Line Contest held at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg in conjunction with the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE).

There were 29 contestants divided into three age classes competing for the titles in the youth-only competition. It is open to anyone between the ages of 9 and 21, as of Oct. 1, the year of the show.

According to show rules, the entrants are judged on the mode of dress selected, which must be appropriate, attractive, and lend dignity to the show class, which is part of the KILE sheep program.

While the youth don't necessarily have to make their own wool outfits, the rules state that they must furnish their own outfit and it must be at least 80-percent wool.

The competition provides a contest with the goal of educating participants and observers about the uses and methods of handling wool for clothing.

Judges for the contest have three areas of concern to score with a possible perfect total of 100 points: the appearance of contestant and outfit 40 points; control and presentation 25 points; and appearance of ewe, 35 points.

Each contestant has to present a registered yearling ewe, trained and properly prepared for the show ring, as well as fulfilling health requirements for show animals.

The specific age divisions are made after the entries are all posted. The reason for that is to try to ensure equal size age groups.

The show demonstrates the contestants' abilities to select a wool-dominated outfit that, as in other wardrobe competitions, shows balance in selection of texture, color, accessories, and other related factors, as well as the ability to handle the ewe.

Many contestants add some matching accessories to their sheep, such a small scarves, or similar dressings.

In the junior division, Emma Lynn Little, of Jeff and Kim Little, of Churchville, Md., took first place, with an outfit of a calf-length plaid dress with a short overvest with a lamb applique.

At halter she showed a yearling ewe Jacob breed, an archaic, small statured, Old World spotted wool breed that her family raises.

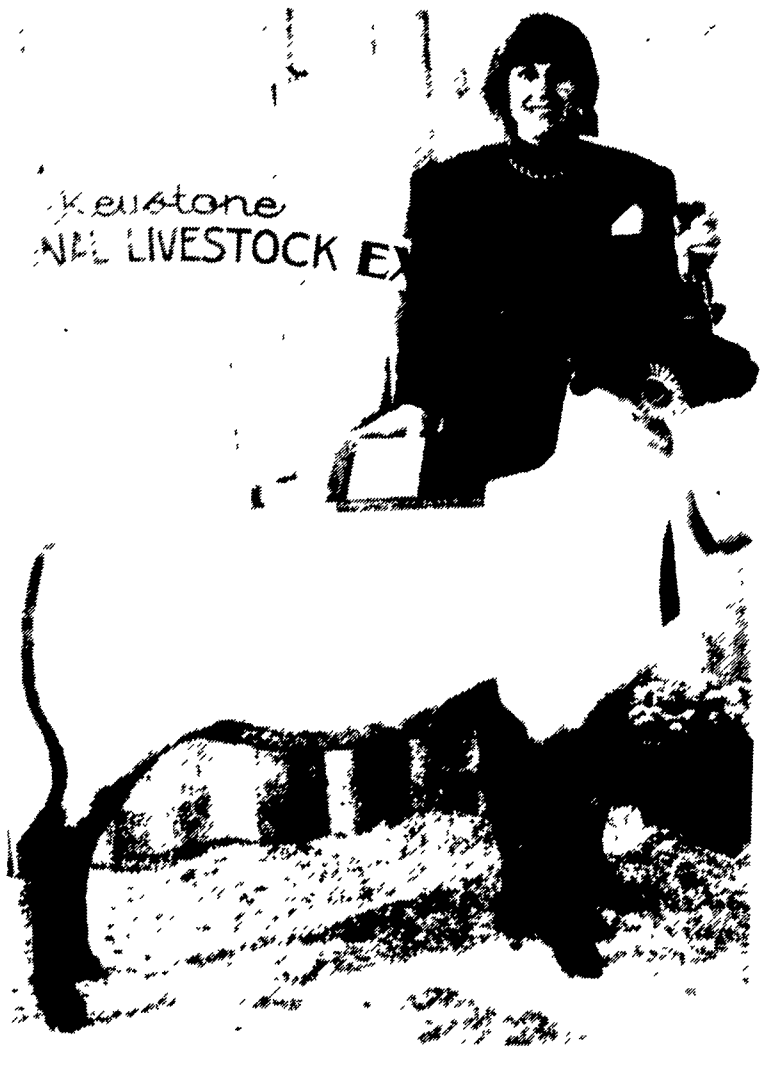
Brandon Winebark, of Myerstown, took a second place out of the field of nine contestants, with a brown, wool vest over a longsleeve, white turtleneck shirt, brown wool pants with a cuff, and a woolen felt, brimmed hat. Amanda Miller, of Mertztown took third.

In the intermediate-age division, Jaime Fought, daughter of John "Speedy" Fought, of Carlisle, who showed her yearling Dorset, Sunshine.

Taking second was Emily Rutledge, of Jarrettsville, Md., while Tiffany Harward, of Forest Hill, Md., placed third.

In the senior division, Andrea Musser, daughter of Donald and Mary Musser, of New Middletown, Ohio, placed first with a double-breasted jacket over a turtle neck shirt, and wool skirt. She showed a Suffolk ewe.

In second place in the senior division was Shelly Patton, of Waynesburg, while Christy Lucas, of Englishtown, N.J., took third.



Andrea Musser is the first place winner in the senior-age division of the 1996 Keystone Lead Line competition and she is also the 1996 Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen.

Some of the junior-aged contestants in the Keystone Lead Line competition stand before the table of judges.

Lead Line Champion Andrea Musser Becomes Wool Queen

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Nineteen-year-old Andrea Musser was named the 1997 Lamb and Wool Queen at the 40th annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition held at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, Oct. 2-7.

A freshman at Ohio State University, Musser represented Beaver, Butler and Lawrence counties at the contest. She is the daughter of Donald and Mary Musser, New Middletown, Ohio. She also won first place in the senior division of the Keystone lead line competition a day earlier.

Her family has a flock of 35 registered Suffolk, which they show at county fairs. She has shown at the National Junior Suffolk Show, the Ohio State Fair, and the North American International Livestock Expo. She has shown at KILE for eight years.

A member of 4-H for 10 years, Musser said that the sheep industry has had a major impact on her life. She said she hopes to help increase the market for fresh Pennsylvania lamb, through a grassroots campaign of education.

Named alternate was Shelley Patton, Waynesburg, sponsored by Greene County Sheep and Wool Growers. Seventeen-year-old Patton is a senior at Waynesburg Central High School, and plans to major in international communications. She has spent nine years in 4-H, with projects in market lambs, breeding sheep, market hogs and market steers. She also participated in the lead line competition for 12 years. This year she placed second in the senior division. Her parents are Rick and Janice Patton.

Jenna Svonavec, 17, also participated in the contest. She is the daughter of Joseph and Rosemary Svonavec, and is a senior at Rockwood Area High School. She plans to study to become a nurse anesthetist. She showed the Somerset County Champion Home Grown Lamb in 1994 and showed the lamb which won the Rate of Gain contest at the Fair in 1995. She has attended regional and state 4-H Fashion Revue with outfits she constructed from wool.

Musser will represent the state's lamb and wool industry in many promotional activities during the coming year.

At the Manheim Farm Show Swine competition, Corey Pfautz, left, shows both the champion and the reserve champion market hogs. Judge Henry Holloway selected the hogs from 98 entries.

Showmanship champions, from left, are Tracy Bollinger, 16-and up; Amy Becker, 14-15-years; Derick Bollinger, 11-13-years; and Joelynn Donough, 8-10-years.

Pfautz Shows Both Champion And Reserve Market Hogs At Manheim

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — For the first time that exhibitors could recall, the same person won both grand and reserve champion market hog titles at the Manheim Swine Show Monday evening.

A jubilant Corey Pfautz said, "I tried a long time for this."

Corey has been showing hogs for 10 years. Of the 98 entries, Judge Henry Holloway, a Yorkshire breeder from Darlington, Md., selected the two Hamp/Duroc cross champions for heavy muscling, extreme leaness, and powerfully made structure and design.

Corey said both are homebred. "It's genetics. The mother won at E-town last year."

He had the sow AI bred from an Indiana boar.

Corey and his siblings raise 60 show pigs on their parents' Rick and Sue Pfautz's farm in Lititz. Although Corey isn't new to winning circles, he said this was the first time he showed the champion at Manheim.

The show earnings will go toward Corey's schooling at York Technical Institute, where he is studying drafting.

Corey also placed second in the most advanced class of showmanship and fitting. But it was Tracy Bollinger who took top honors by impressing the judge with her ability to keep her pig where he could see it on the opposite side of the ring.

Tracy's younger brother Derick has some of his sister's finesse in showmanship. He took the champion placing in the 11-13 year-old age group.

"First impressions are real important," Holloway said of his observation that Derick appeared "real calm and easy" in his ability to maneuver his pig around the ring. Derick also showed the champion mediumweight market hog.

In the 14-15 year-old class, Amy Becker took the top placing.

In the 8-10 year-old class, Joelynn Donough placed first. The spunky 9 year-old in her first year of showing both pigs and sheep has been raking up wins across the county, not only in showmanship but in champions. At Manheim, she also showed the lightweight market hog champion.

4-H Gardeners Donate Produce

The 4-H families who had vegetable gardens at the Garrett-Williamson Farm at Newtown Square had a very productive season.

Recently the seven families harvested their excess produce and donated it to the Philabundance Share the Harvest program. Philabundance distributes food to a wide network of community groups and shelters that assist low-income people, according to Bud Bryan, Delaware County 4-H coordinator.

The gardening group is part of the 4-H Agricultural Club that meets at the 4-H Farm and Educational Center on the Bishop Hollow Road property of the Garrett-Williamson Foundation in Newtown Square. Debbie Murphy of Collingdale is the adult volunteer leader of the garden project. The 4-H members are Emilie and Robert Davis, Springfield; Karen Boody, Newtown Square; David and Adam Murphy, Collingdale; Julie McClelland, Colwyn; Neil Lande, Wynnewood; Jon, Jackie and Jessica Van Patton; Ridley Township; Aaron and Patrick Barrett, Upper Darby.

Members of the 4-H Agricultural Club learn more than plant and animal science. They improve their communication skills, decision making abilities, working with others and leadership capabilities. Service to other people and the community are also stressed in 4-H. The garden group decided to become involved with donating vegetables to needy people through Philabundance as their community service project.

Membership in 4-H is open to all girls and boys between the ages of 8 and 19, regardless of where they live. The programs offered are more diverse than just agriculture, including many aspects of science, home economics, nature and other hands-on educational activities. Adult volunteers supervise 4-H clubs and teachers integrate 4-H projects into their school curricula.

FFA LEADERSHIP FOR A Lifetime©

Penn Yan FFA Members Attend FFA Camp

MARCY QUACKENBUSH
Penn Yan FFA Reporter

Five Penn Yan FFA members attended the 50th year of camping at Camp Oswegatchie, the New York State FFA Leadership Training Camp, July 21-26.

The members included Billy Hand, Natalie Jensen (2nd year), John Kriese (Penn Yan FFA adviser), Marcy Quackenbush (New York State FFA officer), and Dawn Smart.

Leadership training was just one of many opportunities each camper had. Every day each camper attended leadership training classes. During these classes the state officers (District 3 President Bob Chapin, District 5 President Ashlee Smith, and District 8 President Marcy Quackenbush) and Leadership Training Coordinator Mandi Millen taught the campers how to improve communication, cooperation, and teamwork skills.

These skills are taught using the low ropes course which are full of obstacles each group had to conquer. Some courses included the "maze" where you and your group had to go through a maze blindfolded with only a rope to guide you through. The "wall" consisted of a 20-foot wooden wall, where you had to get the entire group up and over it.

Every day you could choose from many activities, including waterskiing, canoeing, sailing, sports, mountain biking, horseback riding, swimming, archery, hiking, arts and crafts, and high rope's course, and the brand new climbing and rappelling tower.

The high rope's course is also made up of obstacles, also 40 feet in the air. The campers were strapped in a harness and sent to their first obstacle, climbing a tree. From there you went to the "multi vine," the "Burma Bridge," the "catwalk," and the "zip line." The tower is a 40-foot high obstacle that campers must climb up using molds to grab on to. When they reach the top of the tower, they must rappel down it. The tower was built this year in memory of John S. Gold, a former member of the New York State FFA.

During the afternoons, campers could participate in leadership contests. Natalie Jensen (Penn Yan FFA treasurer) competed in the creed speaking contest, in which she tied for first place, and the extemporaneous speaking contest, in which she also received first place. Dawn Smart competed in the creed speaking contest and tied for first place.

Every night there were night activities like the rodeo, woodsman's night, skit night, and the banquet/dance night. Natalie Jensen was elected as the student adviser of the camp banquet where she also received an Outstanding Leadership Award. Also at the banquet, Dawn Smart received the Believing in Yourself Award and Billy Hand received the Most Likely to Show Up in the Hospital Award.

The Penn Yan Chapter of FFA would like to thank Gloria Carroll and Mr. and Mrs. John Kriese for letting us celebrate 50 years of fun-filled activities at Camp Oswegatchie!

Maryland FFA Safe Tractor Operator Contest

Kris Manahan of the Frederick FFA Chapter won the first place banner in the Safe Tractor Operator Contest held Aug. 29 during the Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

The contest was sponsored Eastern Equipment Dealers Association as a special project of the Maryland FFA Foundation. The second place individual for the Safe Tractor Operators Contest was Jason Watt of the FSK FFA Chapter.

According to contest superintendent, Dr. Lee Grant of the Department of Agricultural Engineering at the University of Maryland at College Park, there were seven regional representatives registered. The contest consisted of three components — a written examination, safe tractor operation, and a problem solving activity. Each student drove a tractor through two courses, one with a two-wheel implement and one with four wheel implement towed behind.

The students were evaluated during the driving section on safety, time, and their accuracy while driving the course. In the problem solving, each student was given a tractor that would not start and had to find the problem and correct it. The top scoring individuals receiving gold medals were:

1. Kris Manhan, Frederick; 2. Jason Watt, FSK; 3. Jeremy Troxell, Frederick.

Besty Haas from Vanderbilt, Fayette County, took the Berlin Community Fair by storm with her numerous entries. She was an oft-tilted "premier exhibitor." Here she is shown in the floral department which she had entered fo the first time and ended up with the most premium money.

Community Pride Runs High At Berlin Community Fair

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — The Berlin Community Fair, held recently for the 59th time is an event in which community pride is in strong evidence.

That's because, after all this time, the far-reaching fair has long-since drawn hundreds of participants who claim no other attachment to the community, and because its enduring success is shared by the Brothersvalley School District.

Started in 1937 by the district agriculture students, under advisor, Bill Igoe, the fair was eventually expanded to welcome those folks who lived outside the borders of the school district.

It also became a member of the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs and receives state reimbursement for the premiums it pays — this year $5,618.

Doyle Paul, the current Berlin-Brothervalley FFA advisor who, for 27 years has presided over the organizational end, says there is excellent cooperation between the fair association and the school district.

Classes are held as usual when the ag students prepare the big gymnasium for perhaps, 3,000-plus entries, arranged skillfully, on the covered tiers of bleachers, tables and so forth.

For instance, the vegetable department this year recorded an impressive 537 entries for which the premiums paid amounted to $622.50. It was one of 23 departments.

Later, premium cards, check writing, and running the balances were ideal experiences for students enrolled in the business education curriculum.

"It's a community activity that allows residents to participate in an activity of the school districts while students are attending classes," said Paul. "It's still a very normal day for our children."

More than that, the free, four-day event is a very attractive place for social interaction, especially for senior citizens who want very much to be a part of things.

Barbara Kerschensteiner is such a person. She's missed the fair only three times in her life. After being widowed earlier, Barbara was married to Philip Kerschensteiner some six years ago.

She won't miss the Berlin Community Fair. It's in her blood. She, herself was graduated from the Berlin high school, as were her sons and now, her grandsons.

A big smile on her face, more than anything else, spoke volumns about community pride, as Philip guider her through the aisles on a wheelchair.

Scores of flowers and plants, needle and handcrafted items, photographic entries and baked goods that were sold one evening by auctioneer Merle Mishler, along with separate departments for the youth, were all of interest to Barbara.

There were also seeds and grains, quilts and rugs and all manner of creative artwork.

Pets were allowed a parade of their own, outside near the ag complex and the chickens and rabbit entries were housed away from the main school building.

Friday night the large tractor pull was scheduled and Saturday there was a lawn and garden tractor pull, pedal power for youngsters and an A.T.V. pull.

Some 30 persons serve a rotating membership on the board of directors, along with the teacher of vocational agriculture and the aide, two members of the district board of education that are appointed by the school board, and two faculty members.

Their goal is to continue the purpose of the Berlin Community Fair, as in its by-laws ... "encourage a spirit of cooperation ... create interest in improved methods of farming ... nurture a love for farm life and those things that pertain to agriculture and homemaking ..."

There are no gambling games or devices to detract from the wholesome atmosphere of the celebration.

Cleanup is done by the ag students who lug the stuff that needs to be stored and apply themselves to restoring the former order of all the buildings.

Donald and Edna Deist from Glencoe, Somerset Co. are enjoying the large vegetable display set up on bleachers last weekend at the Berlin Community Fair.

GOOD DEALS...AND A GOOD DEAL MORE

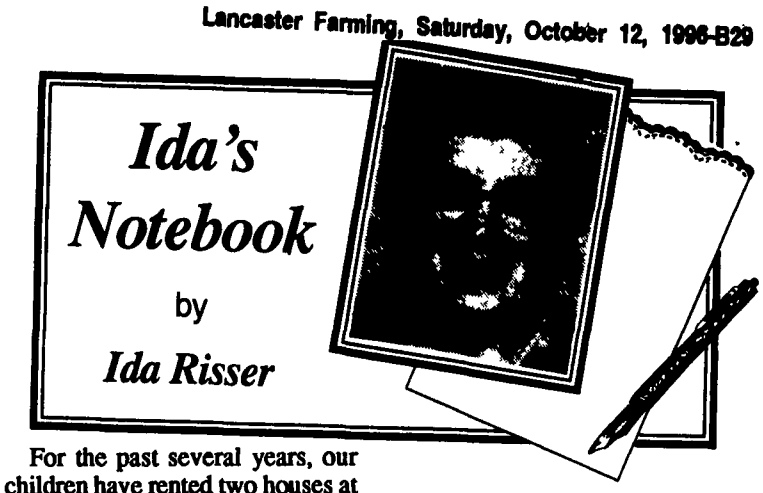
Nothing Runs Like a Deere®



For the past several years, our children have rented two houses at the beach and spent a week together. Then they decided to try a vacation in the mountains. Now we find that reserving a place for 27 people is not an easy task. Should we rent campers, cottages or maybe a hunting cabin? We've been checking out various places as we travel around the state.

We spent two days in Snyder County recently and spent a lot of time fishing. My husband is always trying to catch that one big fish while I'm satisfied with pan fish. At least, the action keeps things lively as I got 19 one evening in Lake Walker.

The next morning we had the lake to ourselves from eight to eleven. As far as we knew, there was no one within miles. A few fish jumped out of the water and all that we saw was a big splash.

As we returned to our camper, we realized that fall is really here. The roadsides were covered with goldenrod and some maples had red and orange leaves. There were acorns on the forest floor and bright colored toadstools too.

Our daughter from Texas visited us for a few days last week. Her son is growing up so quickly and now is into everything. My living room looks bare as everything small that he could grab was moved to higher ground. So that when my sister from Michigan dropped in on Sunday, I felt like apologizing for its appearance. But, Bryan's visit was certainly worth the inconvenience.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Here's another recipe for Vivian Kunkle, who requested recipes without sugar. Anna Martin of Denver, Pa., has supplies it.

Applesauce Cookies

1¾ cups cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon Sucaryl solution or 24 tablets, crushed
1 egg
1 cup sugarless applesauce
⅓ cup raisins
1 cup all-bran

Sift together flour, salt, seasonings, and baking soda.

Mix butter, Sucaryl, and egg until light and fluffy. Add flour and applesauce alternately. Mix well.

Fold in raisins and all-bran. Drop by teaspoonfuls 1 inch apart. Bake 370 degrees 20 minutes. Yield 4 doz. 39 calories per cookie.

ANSWER — Perma Kemmerer wanted a recipe for Friendship Cake, and a reader sends this one with a starter:

Friendship Starter

1 cup sugar
1 cup milk
1 cup flour

Combine the ingredients in a large, deep glass or plastic container. Cover lightly. If the container has a lid, leave in slightly ajar. Or, place a piece of cheesecloth over the container and secure it with a rubber band. Store at room temperature.

Stir every day for 17 days.

On day 18, do nothing.

On days 19, 20, and 21, stir.

On day 22, stir and add 1 cup flour, 1 cup sugar and 1 cup milk. Stir again.

On days 23, 24, 25, and 26, stir.

On day 27, add 1 cup flour, 1 cup sugar, and 1 cup milk. Stir. You should have about 4 cups starter.

Give one cup each to two friends and keep the remaining 2 cups for yourself.

Friendship Cake

1 cup starter
⅔ cup oil
3 eggs
2 cups flour
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons baking soda

Stir well, but do not use electric mixer. For variety, add desired amount of one or more of the following ingredients: apples, raisins, nuts, dates, chocolate chips, cocoa, or drained fruit cocktail, or up to 4 overripe bananas. Bake in a floured and greased Bundt pan at 350 degrees for 40-50 minutes. Cool on a rack for about one hour. Turn over onto serving plate. Optional: add frosting or sprinkle with powdered sugar.

A BRIEF TOUR OF SOLAR BARNS

Phil Durst
Penn State
Cooperative Extension
Montour County

Management intensive grazing seems synonymous with words such as low-investment, simplicity, management, and good environment. That is why I think that solar, or greenhouse-style barns, may especially be of interest to graziers, for those words are often used to describe these structures.

Whether for calves or cows, solar or greenhouse-style structures have proven themselves on farms in Vermont, New York, the upper Midwest, and even on some Pennsylvania farms. They have demonstrated themselves as a good choice based on air flow, dryness, and visibility of animals, while being adaptable and of reasonable cost.

Let's go inside a couple just to give you a feel for them, and then talk about how it may fit into your operation.

Calf Barn

The first one that we will look at is a single gable calf building that measures 30 x 70 feet. You can see that the structure is oriented with the end into the wind. This helps to ensure good air flow in the winter months when the sides are closed. The end wall has a door that we will go through, but the walls are only shade cloth (80 percent shade) clear up to the peak. In the winter, they may use some plastic on the lower portion of the end wall to completely block wind, but the shade cloth essentially reduces drafts.

Inside this building there is a utility room built into the corner for sorting milk replacer, calf grain, wheelbarrow, and some other essentials close to the animals but in a protected place. They have simply used plywood to construct the room. There is a water spigot on its outside wall.

The environment is good inside even though the day is very sunny and only a slight breeze is blowing because of the shade cloth stretched across the plastic roof and secured with bungee cords. They have used a shade cloth here that blocks 85 percent of the light.

Look how easy it is to observe the calves. There are three rows of pens with two service alleys. This building has 21 individual pens separated one to two feet. Each calf is in a 4 x 6-foot hogwire pen with a bracket for two buckets. There is no hiding in these pens, but more than that, it also means that moisture can't hide either. This building sits on eight inches of stone with drain tile every six feet. The stone is covered by sawdust which stays dry because of the breeze and light.

The plastic on the sides of the building is rolled up five feet so that the breeze flows through at calf level. It feels really good inside here even though it is not that pleasant outside. From what the operators tell me, that is the same story in the winter because the shade cloth is removed from the roof and the sunlight comes in.

At the far end of the calf building, they have included two group pens. By taking calves from individual housing into a group pen in the same environment and location, the stress of the animal is reduced, and calves are more likely to continue to gain weight without interruption. There is a scrape alley in these pens and a bedded area.

Cow Barn

Now on to the freestall cow barn. This has a look completely different from the calf building. The plastic covering of the freestall barn is 12 feet from the ground. At that level, the galvanized bow structure of each day of the building is covered by the double layer of plastic.

The layout here is a six-row barn with center drive-through feed alley. This barn has five bays, or sections, so there are four gutter connections between bays. At those "valleys" are the support posts. These fit well with the layout of the barn and bay widths can be changed to correspond to the layout decided upon by the dairy producer. You can see that the support posts are at the head of the stalls.

With 12-foot sides open all around, the air flow is terrific. And again, we have shade cloth over the plastic in the warmer months so that the effect is like being under a tree. They have used a 95 percent shade cloth so that summer heat is less of a problem on these cows. They tell me that when it is time to put the shade cloth on, they walk down the gutters between the bays (that is where the support is) and unroll the shade cloth.

For more information, request the packet entitled "Greenhouse Barns" by calling the Montour County Extension office at (717) 275-3731. You may also be interested in a companion information packet called "Lower-Cost Dairy Milking Facilities." If so, request it when you call.

Happy Grazing!

Getting rid of those annoying hang-ups in your operation is easier than ever.

The new SURGE® One Touch™ makes stanchion milking as easy as this. A lightweight, gun-grip design integrates the milk line and pulsation connections into one simple process. Yet it's built incredibly tough to handle the real world demands of the dairy barn.

Most importantly, One Touch brings high-tech automation to stanchion operators with two optional management modules.

The TIMEKEEPER™ II module signals you when the cow finishes milking and displays how long she took to milk...promoting fast, consistent milking that leads to better udder health.

The Milk Yield Module measures individual cow production and milking time, allowing instant analysis of each cow's performance.

By putting today's production information at your fingertips, the SURGE One Touch lets you capture your cow's performance in the palm of your hand.

Emu Seminar Nov. 2

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Emu Farmers Association is sponsoring a seminar on incubating and hatching on Nov. 2, in the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex. The featured presenter will be Lisa Kinder, ratite research specialist from the University of Arkansas.

Kinder has been doing research with ratites, in particular with incubating and hatching. In one of her research projects she incubated more than 100 emu eggs and then opened one of them every two days to observe and measure the process from start to finish. She photographed each stage, and does a slide presentation of the results. This was shown at the American Emu Association convention in Orlando, Fla. this past July, and will again be shown on Nov. 2 in Harrisburg.

Kinder's presentation will be geared to beginners as well as experienced emu farmers. It is anticipated that there will be a question and answer session, as well as the formal presentations. There will also be other activities at the seminar, including an emu lunch and a silent auction.

More information can be secured from the Pennsylvania Emu Farmers Association, P.O. Box 83, Jonestown, PA 17038, fax (717) 865-6487 and e mail, rollinrr@redrose.net.

Casey And Kramer Celebrate Last Year In 4-H With Manheim Champion

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Having a good animal to start with sure helps. Then feeding it right and leading it around a few hours each day can go a long way in winning a steer show.

It's a matter of getting the right animals and the willingness to work with them, said grand champion market steer exhibitor Casey High.

Tuesday night, Casey, 18, son of Mae and Larry High, Lititz, won grand champion market steer honors for the second time in a row at the Manheim Fair with his 1,344-pound Angus/Maine Anjou crossbred steer, Kramer.

Casey said he named the steer after one of the lead characters on the TV show, "Seinfeld," to call the steer "something different." It was only a matter of getting a good steer to start with and working with him that made the difference, said Casey.

Casey obtained the steer from Kurt Forsythe in Ohio. A Warwick High School senior, Casey said this would be his last year in 4-H.

Travis Werley, show judge from Shoemakersville, said the overall champion, from the light heavyweight division, gets as "close as any to what the market is looking for today."

Werley, ag loan officer for Lebanon Valley National Bank, picked the 1,233-pound 4-H medium weight champion shown by Ryan Donough as reserve. The reserve champion, a Maine Anjou crossbred, was obtained from Scott Hummel, Selinsgrove.

Ryan, 12, son of Ed and LaRue Donough, Manheim, is in the 7th grade at Manheim Central Middle School. He said the steer was named "Trojan" after its sire.

Obtaining a reserve overall champion "has a lot to do with genetics," said Ryan. "We try to lead them every day we can. Exercise is probably the most important thing."

Ryan said the steer is worked about two hours every day, helping to fine-tune it for competition.

Werley, show judge from Shoemakersville, is a Delaware Valley College graduate. On his family's farm, he cares for 120 acres and raises about 36 head of beef on a Polled Hereford and Angus cow/calf operation.

In all, there were 16 exhibitors and 17 steers. Following is a list of show placings.

Parasite Control Important In Fall, Winter

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Controlling parasites is a challenge for any cattleman. Keeping pests under control is cost-effective any time of the year, but fall and early winter weather offers the best opportunities to take steps that reduce possibilities of herd contamination.

Dr. John Hough, research and performance director of the American Hereford Association, said the fall season is a particularly susceptible period for infestation, especially in warmer climates.

All cattle, particularly young stock, are affected by a number of internal parasites. These include roundworms, liver flukes, tapeworms, and single-celled parasites. All kinds of internal parasites can be economically significant and lower profit potential. Recognizing internal parasites, life cycles, and methods of infection can be of great benefit to your parasite control program.

Roundworms are very common and several species found in cattle of all ages across the country. The largest infections are usually found in weaning and yearling cattle. Depending upon the species, the worms may penetrate and migrate in tissue, suck blood, or otherwise cause small hemorrhages, cause erosion of surface layers of the gut lining, or cause formation of nodules. A major effect of roundworm infection is a severe loss of appetite resulting in failure to grow or even weight loss.

Noticing these and other signs associated with roundworm infection should be an indication to start controlling the problem. Complete eradication of roundworms is practically impossible. However, control can be obtained and maintained.

"Grazing management is one of the first areas to consider for parasite control," said Hough. "Pastures considered to have the lowest levels of parasite infection should be reserved for younger, more susceptible stock. Reduced pasture contamination can result from the pasture being vacated for several weeks in summer for hay production, being grazed exclusively by older dry cows for several weeks, harvested cropland, or rested pasture planted in annual forages and frequent, extensive treatment with dewormers."

Hough also said that careful use of broad spectrum dewormers have significant benefits to help reduce parasite losses in cattle, whether roundworms or other internal parasites. The primary purpose of dewormers is to reduce levels of pasture contamination, not to cure sick animals.

"Be certain to apply dewormers at recommended rates and always follow label directions," Hough said. "More is not always better."

Hough emphasizes that you cannot eliminate all parasites, but control can often be cost-effective and increase the potential profits from your herd.

Your county extension office or local veterinarian can provide additional information about parasite control.

Forage Testing Increases Herd Health

KANSAS CITY, Mo — Forages are the basic feed resource for the beef industry. Proper management and use of forages will determine the success of most cow-calf and backgrounding operations.

In addition to the efficient use of forages, cattlemen are continually challenged with reducing maintenance costs of keeping cows and increasing returns on every calf crop.

The constant concern for quality feeds is an additional consideration of conducting a forage testing program. Although there isn't complete agreement on the total costs of feeding and maintaining a brood cow, it is certain that protein and energy requirements are the major portion of these costs.

Dr. John Hough, research and performance director for the American Hereford Association, said that high-quality forages can reduce feed costs while increasing profits.

"It is true that a beef cow can exist on low-quality rations, but there is a practical limit for utilizing these feeds. Properly balanced rations utilizing only forages may provide all the nutrients required for brood cows and may potentially eliminate the need for purchasing 'off-farm' supplements," Hough said.

There are several methods of forage analysis available today, including chemical and artificial rumen techniques that give reliable measures of feeding value for forages.

The basic information a forage test should provide are moisture, protein and reliable estimates of digestibility, depending on the types of ration and livestock involved.

Whether the forage test should include mineral analysis will depend on the feeding program, geographical area and fertiliztion, if any. Certain minerals are critical for the well-being of cattle, but the margins between deficiencies and over-feeding are adequate for ration planning. And, the cost of mineral supplements is generally less than the cost of analysis.

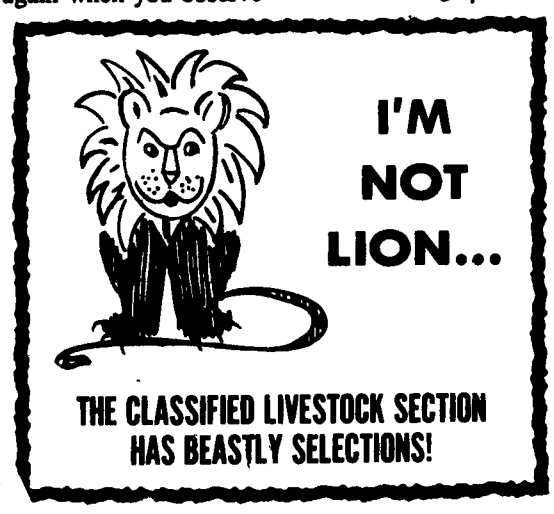
"Forages, or hay, vary considerably in digestible energy and protein, so it is best that each lot of forage be tested separately when possible," Hough said. "When it's not practical to test each individual lot, several may be combined and tested together. You should also test again when you observe or suspect quality changes."

For baled hay, sample at least 10 blocks of each lot, preferably with a core type sampler and always from the end of the bale.

For loose hay, take core samples perpendicular to the direction the hay is layered in the stack. Sample at least 10 locations.

When you're preparing samples to send to a lab, be sure to label each sample properly, and include information about the make-up of the sample, when it was harvested, when the sample was taken and any other information pertinent to the sample.

"Forage testing only helps to make correct management decisions and the test itself doesn't reduce protein costs or balance rations. Until the test results are applied to your operation's grazing practices and feeding methods, you will not see economic results," Hough said.



Weight Records Help Lower Herd Maintenance Costs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Keeping weight records may be a chore, but accurate records can help you determine which animals are the best producers and can be of great help when culling.

If you are about to start a record keeping program on your herd, you must first clearly understand what you are doing, why you are doing it and the goals for which you are aiming, according to Dr. John Hough, research and performance director for the American Hereford Association.

By identifying these three things, you can pinpoint the benefits you expect which justify the effort you put in. The benefits from good record keeping are mainly economic — a prime justification for recording. Also, management decision making will be easier and based on sound reasons.

One reason for recording weights is to make better decisions when culling the herd. You generally will want to cull cows that fail to calve or produce calves with lower overall weights.

"Experience has shown that cattlemen who keep accurate weight records generally have more knowledge of their herds. Because many of their decisions are based on easily-accessed records, they can select for the best calves and replacement heifers," Hough said.

A number of weighing tools are available and newer methods of weighing are becoming more accepted nationwide. Stationary scales are still prevalent and offer a good method of weighing cattle. However, because the scales are only in one place, the cattle must be rounded up and weighed one at a time, creating stress on the animals and taking a considerable amount of time. Portable, spring-loaded scales help ease this situation some, but still require a good deal of setup time.

Electronic weighing systems are gaining acceptance by cattlemen in many areas. In addition to the accuracy of the units, the ease of setup and the ability to "go just about anywhere" make a number of electronic weighing systems preferable.

"The type of weighing system you use isn't as important as the way you use the information," Hough said.

"You must take the weight records and incorporate them into your bull-buying or heifer selection decisions, marketing plans, and even use them to sell your cattle to customers. Just having the information isn't enough — you have to actually use it daily," Hough said.

By using the information you obtain from weight records, you can lower herd maintenance costs, know more about your herd, and have accurate information available when selecting or selling cattle. All of these have the potential to increase your profit and cut costs.

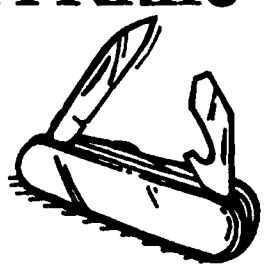
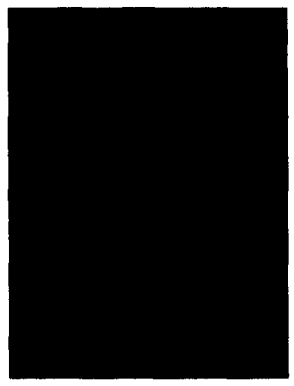
A Knife Cuts Twine... An Oswalt® Hay Saw Cuts Hay!



(NEW HAY SAW PROCESSOR MAKES QUICK WORK OF LONG STEMMED HAY)



Some mixer companies will tell you they have "knives" installed on the augers of their mixers that will cut through long stemmed hay But that's like comparing a pocket knife to a chain saw Oswalt's newest feed mixer cuts through long stemmed hay, turning it into a blended, uniform and highly digestible ration and it does it in record time!

Hay Saw sections are installed in a continuous ribbon on the leading edge flighting of the bottom augers As hay is pulled into the lower augers, an even sawing action cuts effortlessly through the long stemmed hay And because it saws as the auger turns, it actually processes hay with a lot less torque, saving time and fuel

Ask your Oswalt Dealer for a demo Then you'll see what we mean when we say Nothing Performs Like an Oswalt!

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency: this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

You Rise Up Early When You Live On A Farm.
The Chores are all waiting as you enter the barn.
Soon you will leave and go into the house, your breakfast is waiting, made by your spouse.
Now before you go out, I have something to say.
I was cleaning upstairs, the other day. Some won't go up, others just fall down, you can feel the cold air blowing all around. Look at these windows, how easy to clean, a house full of these would fulfill my dream. Why don't we call them, they look so nice there is no charge for giving a price.

LLAMAS LLAMAS LLAMAS

If you've been considering starting in llamas, or having a llama for a pet, why not stop in to see our herd.

Our young males start at $500, our weanling females at $2,500, our pregnant females at $3,500. A deposit will hold any of our crias (baby llamas) for you.

We prefer selling off the farm, rather than subjecting our animals to the stress of auctions.

All of our llamas are registered with the International Llama Registry. Some of the finest wool and blood lines can be found in our herd, including Otter Creek Harold.

All llamas can be halter led, and are gently trained by teenagers.

IN ALUMINUM BODIES
EBY BUILDS IT

M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24', landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- LANDSCAPE BODIES - Lengths to 12', We'll build to your specs!

Let EBY custom build one for you.

CONSUMER RESPONSE TO NEW LABELING RULE IS MUCH ANTICIPATED

R. Vasilatos-Younken, Ph.D.
Associate Professor
Dept. of Poultry Science

Recently a new ruling by the U.S. Department of Agriculture went into effect that redefines the use of "fresh" as a label on raw poultry products.

When changes to the federal poultry products inspection regulations were originally brought to the public forum for comment last year, they raised considerable debate among industry representatives, consumer groups, and the Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), which amended the existing regulations.

The new rule calls for raw poultry products whose internal temperature has ever been below 26 degrees F but above 0 degrees F to be labeled "(previously) hard chilled" (the use of "previously" is optional). Prior to this amendment, such products did not require this designation and, in fact, could be labeled "fresh" if the internal temperature of the product was above 0 degrees but below 40 degrees F and had not been previously frozen at or below 0 degrees. Raw poultry product which has ever been at or below 0 degrees F must still be labeled with the term "frozen" or (optionally) "previously frozen."

The debate over this labeling change involved a variety of issues, from consumer perception argued from the standpoint of "truth in advertising" to issues of food safety and quality. To understand much of the technical basis of the labeling change, one needs to realize that muscle foods, in particular skeletal muscle, are comprised largely of water, with a variety of biochemical substances both dissolved in this solvent as well as forming the structural components of the tissue.

Broiler breast muscle, for example, is more than 70 percent water on a weight basis. Water freezes at 32 degrees F, but as solutes become dissolved in that water, including salts, sugars, and other biochemical components of intracellular and extracellular fluids, the freezing point of the liquid is lowered.

In fact, most of the free water in whole poultry meat freezes over a temperature range from 27 to 23 degrees F. At 27 degrees F, ice crystals begin to form, and below 26 degrees F, when much of the free water in the tissue is turning to ice, the product becomes hard to the touch. By 23 degrees F, most of the free water is frozen and the product both appears and feels frozen solid. Based on these physical characteristics, FSIS considered 26 degrees F as a reasonable lower threshold for a product to be called "fresh."

A significant issue considered by FSIS is that most consumers are not aware that poultry products sold as fresh at the retail case may have been chilled to a hard consistency and then thawed prior to sale. Advocates of the labeling change argued that consumers assume a product not appearing (or otherwise labeled) hard chilled at the time of sale is generally presumed never to have been so at any time, and decisions related to subsequent product handling, including refreezing, etc., are based on this assumption.

The FSIS held that this labeling change was necessary to prevent consumers from being misled about the nature of the products they purchase and allow them to make informed purchasing decisions. Poultry meat that has been previously hard chilled or frozen and appropriately handled is identical to that of fresh product in terms of nutritional value, and can be comparable in flavor, texture, and other attributes — therefore, this labeling change should not be taken by consumers to imply any difference in product quality.

Some concern over the labeling change focused on the issue of preservation as it relates to product quality. Microorganisms are not killed by temperatures as low as 0 degrees F. However, bacteria such as Salmonella that cause foodborne illness do not grow at temperatures below 40 degrees F. Thus, raising the lower limit which defines fresh poultry from 0 to 26 degrees F should not increase the risk to public health.

Alternatively, spoilage bacteria can grow at temperatures as low as 26 degrees F, but their growth is inhibited at lower temperatures, beginning in the range of 14-15 degrees F. Consequently, a product maintained at the lower 20 degree range of temperature will spoil in a matter of weeks.

Although growth of even spoilage microorganisms will be inhibited in a product chilled to 14-15 degrees F, chemical oxidation that results in "off-flavors" and a loss of product quality (rancidity) occurs after several months. A product frozen to 0 degrees F or less can have a shelf life of a year or more, depending upon its packaging and storage conditions.

Opponents of the new ruling have suggested that in order to remain competitive and meet the new labeling definition of "fresh," a major shift in product handling may occur. That is, more product may be processed and shipped above the temperature limit of 26 degrees F, which might shorten shelf life and increase the incidence of spoilage.

However, based on a survey of broiler marketing practices, FSIS concluded that the new ruling could potentially affect only a portion of the retail market shipped as chill pack, a method that utilizes internal temperatures ranging from 26 to 25 degrees F, and perhaps a miscellaneous segment accounting for only 13 percent of the market. Of the product shipped by chill pack (approximately 57 percent of the retail market), an estimated majority (approximately 72 percent) is shipped over distances that take less than two days, well within the practical limits of shelf-life for product held above 26 degrees F, but below 40 degrees. For the remaining product shipped over longer distances, temperatures in the lower 20 degree F range would still be used.

Much of the concern over the new labeling change evolves around the critical factor of how consumers will respond to the new designation. If it is taken by consumers to reflect a lesser quality product (versus that labeled "fresh"), purchasing trends may shift dramatically, and opponents of the new ruling suggest that reduced competition with local products (because the latter can more easily be brought to market under the "fresh" designation) will raise local product prices without any change in quality. Alternatively, a reduced price differential for product labeled "hard chilled" has been speculated upon, which would transfer some economic benefit to consumers.

YOU'LL LIKE HOW IT TURNS. AS WELL AS WHAT IT TURNS INTO.

One thing you'll appreciate about Case skid steers is how well they maneuver. Thanks to their responsive steering and overall compact size, they have the agility and the power to get the job done. Especially in limited space. Even more impressive is how many jobs they can master. Every Case skid steer is designed to power a long list of profit-producing attachments. So whether the task involves lifting, digging, spreading or cutting, Case machines get it done. And our quick-change coupling systems let you switch attachments fast. Plus, all Case skid steers, from our rugged 18 horsepower gas model to our 56 horsepower diesel, provide the ultimate in power, durability and reliability. In fact, we offer more horsepower than the competition in almost every class. And every model is backed by the best parts, service and financing in the industry. Because our feeling is that dealer support should be every bit as strong and versatile as the machines themselves. So visit your Case dealer and find out more about our full line of skid steers. You'll like them for what they are. And especially for what they become.

New Swing Frame Mower Conditioners

Maneuverability and capacity of a self-propelled...at a pull-type price

Gehl center pivot swing frame mower conditioners deliver high volume cutting and conditioning with outstanding maneuverablity Two new models are available the 2245 with 12 3 cutting width

These machines pivot at the center of the frame for easy header positioning So you can cut back and forth across the field from either the right or left side of the tractor or tow the unit directly behind the tractor for road travel

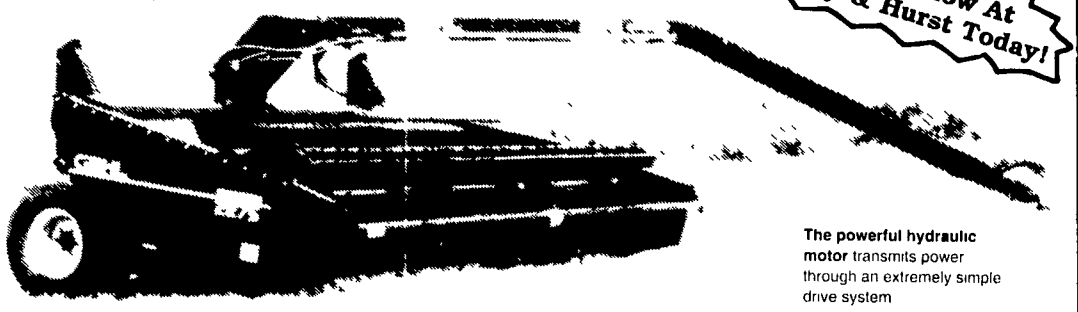
When it comes to cutting and conditioning these swing frames can't be beat Gehl s reliable simplified drive system powers the sicklebar for clean cutting The crop is gently swept to the augers and delivered to the wide 109 inch conditioning rolls for the thorough gentle conditioning needed for quick drying and maximum nutrient retention

If you re ready to cut hay in a big way see your Geh dealer today

One Super Deal On The 12'3" Cut Mower Conditioner

Easily adjustable guard angle
The guard angle adjusts from 6 to 14 degrees to match any field condition

Model 2245 Ready to Mow At Binkley & Hurst Today!



Three point flotation support provides both lateral and vertical flotation The header is carried on two outside arms and pivots on a center link for clean fast cutting in uneven fields This fast reacting system provides outstanding cutterbar protection from rocks and other field obstructions It's easily adjustable for varying field conditions

Self-contained hydraulic system powers the cutterbar reel auger and conditioning rolls Gehl s high capacity hydraulic pump is powered by the tractor PTO

The powerful hydraulic motor transmits power through an extremely simple drive system

Simple, powerful sickle drive A hydraulic motor drives the sickle through a simple gearbox and V belt system with fewer moving parts The single swaybar delivers more power at the sickle head 1500 strokes per minute means smooth cutting at higher ground speeds

109-inch wide machined intermeshing conditioning rolls provide thorough uniform conditioning for fast drying and maximum nutrient retention

Most Mix-All owners will never buy another.

Model MX125 and Model MX170

In fact, you'd probably have a hard time convincing Gehl Mix-All® owners to even look at anything else. And why should they?

The Mix-All's big 21-inch wide hammermill features 66 reversible thin hammers that cut, rather than pound the feed to deliver a more consistent grind and ensure uniform mixing for a better feed conversion rate.

Gehl's self-contained hydraulic system is designed-in, not added on. It provides the precision of infinitely variable in-feed attachment control to match tractor power for greater grinding capacity. Plus you get fast, smooth, trouble-free unloading with greater reliability.

And a wide variety of options and attachments lets you customize you Mix-All to fit any operation

GEHL. Scavenger® Manure Spreaders

In Stock at Binkley & Hurst

THE BEST JUST GOT BETTER!

Better Performance. Gehl Scavenger®, the original V-tank spreader, has built a well-deserved reputation for delivering unmatched performance in a wide variety of materials. The new Scavenger takes that performance to the next level with even better spreading patterns in the toughest heavily bedded manures

Increased Durability. Not only has the new Scavenger been designed to out perform all other V-tank spreaders, but the main drive system components have been beefed-up for extra durability and increased dependability.

Why is Scavenger the Best? One big reason is the unique new round-core auger. This auger features segmented paddles grouped in a spiral pattern This fighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading The paddles are precisely positioned to deliver more uniform feeding to the discharge expeller This exceptional design breaks up and blends all types of manure.

The auger is hydraulically powered both up and down (unlike competitive units that use springs, gravity or fixed augers) This design provides more control to chop through bridged material or power down through heavy loads.

Outstanding Application Control. Gehl's proven Varifio discharge system has been made even better It's 33 percent wider on the Model 1315. On all new models the expeller assembly has been significantly strengthened New square-tooth expeller paddles spread smoothly and evenly You choose the rate you want, from heavy spring-time spreading to light top-dressing With Scavenger you have complete control right at your fingertips

Scaventer is Simply Better. The Gehl Scavenger is a simple spreader It's solid and durable with sealed, welded tank construction and a full length channel steel sub-frame Every Scavenger is built to deliver top performance year after year

Your Gehl Dealer can show you why the new Scavenger V-tank spreader is still the best.

GEHL.

Nothing can maximize the return on investment in your dairy or beef feeding operation like a Total Mixed Ration (TMR) feeding system. And nothing makes TMR work better than a Gehl mixer feeder. Here's why:

- Better Mixing Action — Unique four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy Efficient — Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built To Last — Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Six Sizes — From 150 to 500 cubic feet mixing capacities
- Three Styles — Trailer type, stationary and truck-mounted units to fit your operation.

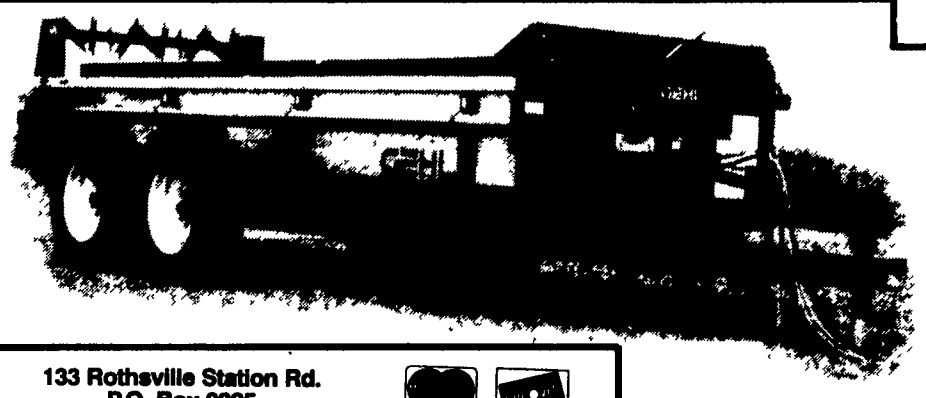
Tandem Axle 325 Box Spreader With Poly Floor For Better Slide & Less Freeze Fast



Splashguards and side rails increase the heaped buehel rating by 14% while protecting spreader sides and keeping sloppy loads off the roads.

Durable Galvanized steel sides are corrosive resistnat for long life. One-piece seamless construction won't catch material or leak.

Heavy-duty gear boxes; one a 90 degree beater drive, the other a two-speed worm box with bronze gear and steel worm, provide efficient power transmission, smoother operation and long life. They're protected by a polyethylene shield that won't rust or dent.

Hydraulic apron drive option provides infinite unloading speeds to match any load, ground speed or application rate requirements. It's available on the four largest models. Conveyor slats are made from 1/4" high-strength rail-steel.

Full length, sturdy A-frame hitch (7-guage steel on MS135/175/250 and 3/16" steel on MS325/425) ties directly to the axle for extra strength and durability. Because the load is carried and not pulled, the weight of the load and its associated stress is more evenly distributed across a broader base.

Low profile design means easy loading by skid loader, front end loader or barn cleaner.

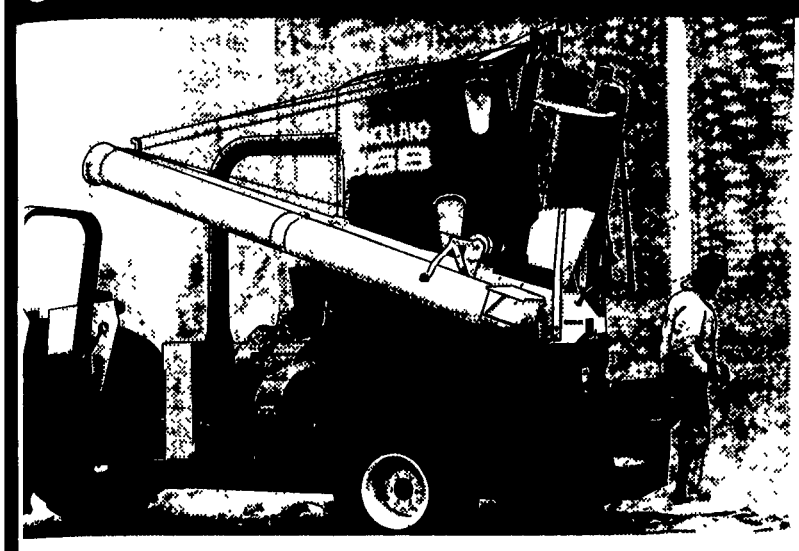
STEADY PERFORMANCE



ON THE JOB DAY-IN, DAY-OUT

New Holland grinder-mixers work hard every day, providing the feeding efficiency you expect from the industry leader.

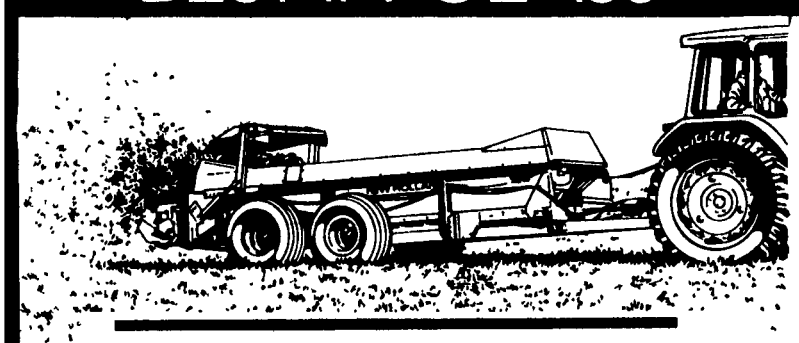
The rugged harmmermill gives un-matched capacity. Thick plates welded to the 21-3/8" heavy-duty hammermill shaft support the hardened hammers making the mill strong, durable, and smooth-running.

The optional electronic scale more than pays for itself by weighing accurately for more feed efficiency.

Durability...that's why New Holland mills continue to be the market leader.

NEW HOLLAND

BEST IN CLASS



BUILT TO LAST AS LONG AS YOU DO

The New Holland Model 185 is a spreader you won't buy too often...because it's going to be with you for a long time.

Here's why:

- Corrosion-resistant steel sides
- Indestructible plastic floor boards (HDPE)
- 12-year free replacement guarantee for floor and sides

The Model 185 carries a 287-bushel load with ease. We'd like to show you why this is the best-selling spreader in its class.

EARTH METAL®– A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE

Case International Earth Metal disk blades do make a world of difference on a tandem disk harrow

An innovative patented process reduces the sulfides in steel that create fracture points in conventional blades Remaining sulfides are left in random non-directional globules You don t have to be a chemist to understand what this means Longer wear – up to 20% longer And 60% greater shock resistance

And our unique shallow concavity crimped center blades cut drawbar pull by 33% (compared to conical blades) and by more than 50% compared to spherical blades That s fuel savings on top of longer wear and greater shock resistance

UTILITY SERIES TRACTORS

BELARUS VALUE. IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Introducing two big changes in how small jobs get done. The 8011L and 9011L offer a low clearance design and tight turning radius that provide even higher levels of maneuverability. Yet they still manage to offer the same durability, value and affordability you expect from Belarus.

Choose from the 8011L and its tough 81 hp four cylinder water cooled engine or the 9011Ls turbo charged 98 hp. Both engines have strong torque characteristics. Add it all up and you've got utility tractors ideal for every type of operation from orchards and vineyards to poultry operations and grounds maintenance.

But the exceptional value doesn't top there. The 8011L and 9011L offer excellent lift capacity for front end loader applications. Other impressive features include power assisted steering and a fully adjustable seat for operator comfort and convenience.

Combined with their ease of maintenance and servicing, it's not hard to see how Belarus makes even the smallest job easier in a big way. That's Belarus value.

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

GROWTH and HEALTH

At the Dairy of Distinction farm of John and Bonnie Hess and family, they farm 1,000 acres east of Gettysburg, and milk 270 Holstein and Brown Swiss cows under their Jobo prefix.

The Hesses want their first calf heifers to freshen at 22 to 24 months and produce 22,000 pounds of milk. So, naturally they need their 300 head of calves and heifers to grow big and fast. And that's why they switched to Purina's calf growing program several years ago.

"The reason we are using Purina feeds for our calves is because it works," John said. "Since we raise the bull calves for beef and the heifer calves for replacements, we are starting 20 to 25 calves each month. So for us the growth and health of our young stock are major concerns in our dairy operation."

In September and October 1993, Purina's Nursing Chow 100 and Startena were put to the test. Six calves were put on the Purina program and six control calvews were left on the program used at the time. The calves were weighed and measured each week. After an average of 50 days, the six Purina fed calves gained 2.45 pounds and grew .09 inches every day on the average. The control calves' average was 1.85 pounds and .06 inches.

Daughter Joy Hess, Adams County dairy princess, is responsible for the calves at her home farm. "Before we fed Purina, our calves were not nearly as large and they didn't gain weight as they do now," Joy said. "They really take off on Nursing Chow and are weaned at a younger age. They like the feed right away, and with the high energy, the calves are more frisky too."

The calves at Jobo are started on Nursing Chow 100 and also given Startena free choice from four to six weeks until they are weaned. Then they are switched to Growena. At three months, the calves begin on a TMR mix with Growena continued as a topdress.

The real proof is in the milking heifers that came through Purina's program. These heifers freshen within the desired time frame and weight from 1,200 to 1,300 pounds. One of their Holstein heifers just produced 27,000 pounds of milk as a two-year-old and is classified VG at 85 points. That is why they can recommend Purina's calf and heifer raising program.

Joy Hess, Adams County dairy princess, is at home with one of her family's growthy calves fed on Purina's Nursing Chow 100, Startena, and Growene programs.

Burcucumber Busts Out In Pa. Corn Fields

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Burcucumber — also known as "wild pickle" — has been "exploding" in many Pennsylvania corn fields, said a Penn State weed specialist.

According to Dr. Bill Curran, Penn State associate professor of weed science, the cumbersome weed can cause heavy damage in corn and soybean fields with potential significant loss of yields.

To make matters worse, the weed is extremely difficult and can be expensive to control. However, the alternatives of using no control or not changing control strategies could prove catastrophic for corn growers.

Curran said the vine-type weed, which looks just like a cucumber plant with broad, five-sided leaves, can branch out through fields of corn and soybeans for great distances. The plants can choke off corn stalks and envelope soybean stands quickly if left untreated.

Worse, the plant produces clusters of seed with 16-20 seeds per cluster. "There could be hundreds of clusters on a plant," Curran said.

In one field near the Penn State Southeastern Field Research and Extension Center, Curran recently counted 14 clusters of seed on four feet of vine. "That's about 250 seeds in four feet alone," he said. Vines can spread 30-40 feet in a season, choking off corn stalks and soybean plants and significantly reducing yield.

A single plant per season can bear up to 10,000 seeds per plant. The seeds can overwinter. In addition, the clusters can attach themselves readily to clothing or fur cover and can be spread easily by rodents or man.

"This is a bottom-ground, wet and heavy soil type of vine weed," said Curran. But in a growing season that was as continuously wet as this past one, any type of field could fall victim. Growers realized, according to the weed specialist, that "no herbicides provided residual control good enough to control the weed all season long."

The problem is made worse by the fact that the vines and seeds pose real hazards at harvest.

"Burcucumber clogs up combines, wraps up in the reels, and clogs up silage choppers," said Curran.

The seed, when it germinates, is very competitive, can reduce yield on crops significantly, and spreads quickly.

Some fields can get so infested with the weed that they simply cannot be chopped for silage or combined.

For corn fields that are past treatment and to be used for silage, there is hope: preliminary research by Curran shows that ensiling kills the seed germination. So when a field is chopped, many of the seeds are taken off and the ensiling process appears to kill the seed.

Some strategies that growers can use if the fields are heavily infested with burcucumber are:

• Designate fields previously in shelled or high moisture corn to be used as silage

Between The Rows

Dr. Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

A STRANGE BUT GENERALLY GOOD YEAR

Another growing season is passing by and I have to conclude that it was another unusual one in many ways.

Unusual weather seems to be the norm these days rather than the exception. As one of my colleagues, Lynn Hoffman, often puts it: This year we had our 25th abnormal season in a row here at Rockspring.

Lynn's probably right that, in the long run, there is no such thing as an average year.

On the other hand, many meteorologists have noted that weather variations and crop production recently have become more extreme, so we need to learn to manage around weather like this.

Some of the weather extremes encountered this year were cool temperatures during the middle of May followed by high temperatures in late May (96 degrees in Williamsport on 5/19), heavy precipitation in July and in some areas, exceptionally heavy precipitation in September.

The early season weather delayed planting for many growers around the state and this continues to have implications on yield and maturity this fall.

Many of these later planted fields are showing poor tip fill that is characteristic of late planted or exceptionally long season hybrids. The cool wet conditions in May also contributed to less than ideal stands in some areas.

In some cases, these stand reductions were related to seed quality problems. In other cases, deeper planting, planting in wet soils and the hot, 90-degree temperatures that occurred in late May contributed to more than the usual number of cases of soil crusting this spring.

I saw several examples of fields planted one day that had a stand problem and adjacent fields planted two days later that were just fine. Several of these wet planted fields not only had a stand problem but they also lagged in development all season.

The take-home message from these fields is that if soil conditions are not right, it is usually better to wait the extra day or two until they dry out.

Producers Try Narrow Row Corn

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — What do dairy farmers in western New York know that some Pennsylvania dairy farmers don't?

For one thing, New York producers have tried narrow row corn with success. For another, they've been so successful with it that there are between 5,000-10,000 acres planted this year, according to Greg Roth, Penn State associate professor and corn expert.

Roth spoke to about 100 producers and agri-industry representatives at a no-till field day at Steve and Cheri Groff's farm near Holtwood in July.

Narrow row corn can be viable in Pennsylvania, even in southeastern counties. According to Roth, diverse farm opera-

Burcucumber

• Rotate to STS soybeans and use a postherbicide product such as Synchrony (Classic plus Pinnacle)

• If burcucumber is present in soybeans, plant Roundup Ready soybeans in narrow rows and plan on two applications of. A narrow row allows for quicker soybean canopy and good weed control. Good control can be possible with the Roundup herbicide (make the first application four weeks after planting and the next 8-10 weeks after planting).

• For corn, according to Curran, the best programs involve the use of Exceed, Beacon, and Marksman herbicides, which Curran said all work well. However, residual control may still be a problem. Use as much atrazine as legally allowable (two pounds per acre is maximum rate).

• One option is to plant wheat or barley and then double-crop beans using STS soybeans with Synchrony.

• If all else fails, rotate the corn to forage. Cutting alfalfa or grass hay can control the burcucumber problem. However, remember about the weed when you rotate back to soybeans.

• Long-term no-till could also provide an opportunity for better management of burcucumber. Penn State research shows that burcucumber may be less of a problem in no-till and easier to control with herbicide, said Curran.

Whatever methods are employed, growers should be aware that if left untreated, a burcucumber problem in the fields can easily get out of hand.

"A yield loss of 15-30 percent could be possible, and I've seen cases where the loss has been up to 100 percent," said Curran.

The burcucumber plant produces clusters of seed, with 16-20 seeds per cluster. "There could be hundreds of clusters on a plant," said Dr. Bill Curran, Penn State weed specialist.

Burcucumber — also known as "wild pickle" — has been "exploding" in many Pennsylvania corn fields, said a Penn State weed specialist. According to Dr. Bill Curran, Penn State associate professor of weed science, the cumbersome weed can cause heavy damage in corn and soybean fields with potential significant loss of yields.

Filling silo! As promised last week, these pictures show what the camera saw on a visit to Donald Bare's farm located along Millport Road in Lancaster County. You get to see what Merle Groff sees at the controls when he opens up a field of corn. And the camera looks down as Joe Burkholder unloads the silage in a hurry to keep an empty wagon ready for the next load in the field.

All farmers who love to work their machines feel the counterforce between power and control. The hand on the controls, the large rubber tire churning the soil, the coupling pin between the harvester and wagon, the worm's-eye view of the towering silos, and scenes of harvesting equipment in operation show the heart pulse of the farmer's everyday world. Welcome to this world. Photos by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

Simplicity Key NCGA Priority

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Lawmakers received one, clear unanimous message from farmers during the farm bill debate: "Make the program simpler, quicker, and with much less red tape!"

"The new farm program is definitely simpler than it has been in the past," said Tom Grau, a former president of the NCDF and now director of the Farm Service Agency (FSA) in Iowa. "When producers walk in to the FSA office, it is taking less time, there are fewer forms, and they are able to get the job done quicker."

To enroll in the new farm program, producers need to complete a production flexibility contract, an update of their farm operating plan for payment eligibility review, and highly erodible land and wetland conservation certification. In return, the FSA gives farmers a production flexibility worksheet that shows estimated payment ranges on each enrolled commodity for the 1996 through 2002 crop years on each farm.

While this might sound like a mouthful, Lynn Laible, NCDF vice president from Magnolia, Ill., said it only took him about 45 minutes to complete the sign-up process.

Jim Mitchell, a NCGA director from Plain City, Ohio said he spent about 60 percent of the time he had in the past. Tim Burrack of Arlington, Iowa, also completed the process in record time. He attributes his quick trip to fewer detailed questions about his operation.

Perhaps Mike Shuter, NCGA director from Frankton, Ind., put it best. "It wasn't any more complicated than it was last year," he said. "I'm more worried about getting stuff in the ground."

BLOWS THE COMPETITION AWAY.

Hesston's Model 7155S blows the competition away with its efficiency and strength. It starts with the reel-type cutting cylinder. The tungsten-carbide–hardened knives slice through the crop mat without wasted power. Wide spacing between the cutterhead knives moves crop through without a lot of bunching or carry-over.

"Straight-Thru Crop-Flow" also helps you put more power into cutting and less into crop handling. You'll get maximum forage for every fuel dollar.

See it at your AGCO Hesston dealer today, along with a wide selection of equipment for all your hay and forage needs, all backed by the AGCO Warranty Program. And ask about flexible financing through Agricredit Acceptance Company.

Brillion

THE QUALITY CRAFTED LINE
BETTER SEED BEDS ...
BETTER STANDS

SOIL BUILDERS

SOIL BUILDERS. Optional Coulter gang can be hydraulically controlled to save maintenance dollars. 5, 7, 9, 11 & 13 shanks. Available in 2 & 3 bar.

HFC FIELD CULTIVATORS

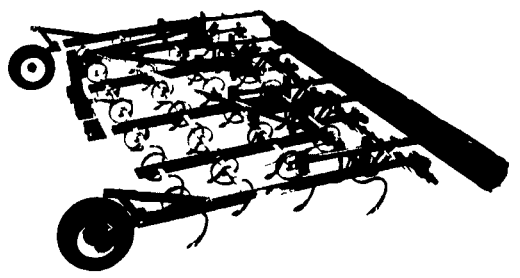
The "heart" of any field cultvator is the shank pivot point. A "bulked up" shank bracket made of cast ductile iron instead of the usual formed steel bracket, incorporated a hardened steel bushing AND a zerk grease fitting to lubricate the pivot point to reduce wear. The result is thousands of acres of extended life of the shanks.

LANDCOMMANDERS
TAKE COMMAND OF TILLAGE PROBLEMS

Brillion's Landcommander gives you total command over the problems of compaction, soil erosion, residue management, and rough fields.
The front disc gang has 22"x1/4" disc blades on 15" spacings. They are designed to cut residue and work the ground to a depth of 6". The Landcommander has the ability to till from 8" to 20" deep. The rear disc gang has 20"x7 ga disc blades on 7.5 spacing. The 6"x4" mainframe is designed to handle the stress from the deep till shanks and disc gangs.

3 PT. BASKET HARROWS



Brillion has designed a 3 pt. S-Tine field cultivator with a larger, aggressively angled 12" diameter rolling basket, a 4-bar frame that allows for either 4" or 6" tooth spacing and an adjustable leveler bar in 12', 15' and 18' sizes. Gauge wheels are optional.

PULVI-MULCHERS
ML & WL

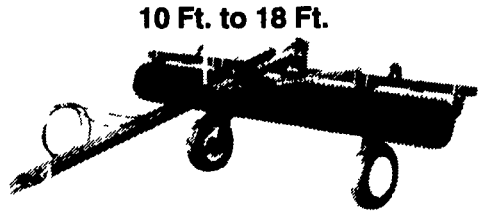
PULVI-MULCHERS Build a firm, clod-free seedbed - one that lets all the seeds germinate at one time. 12'6", 13'10", 15'2" & 18'9" rigid; 21'8" 25' and 30' flat fold.

There's lots more reasons to buy Brillion... stop in and we'll talk.

COMPACTION COMMANDERS
NO-TILL RIPPER/DEEP RIPPER
DESIGNED FOR YOUR CONSERVATION NEEDS
3-5-7 Shank

Brillion introduces their new Compaction Commander...designed to break up hardpan and compaction as deep as 20". CCD 500
The standard V-shaped alloy point and wear strip leaves residue on the surface with minimal soil disturbance. Auto-rest shanks with 20" of trip height allows for non-stop tillage. Parabolic shanks lift and fracture the soil. 39" of underframe clearance assures trouble free operation even in heavy residue.

P-SERIES
TRANSPORT PULVERIZERS
10 Ft. to 18 Ft.

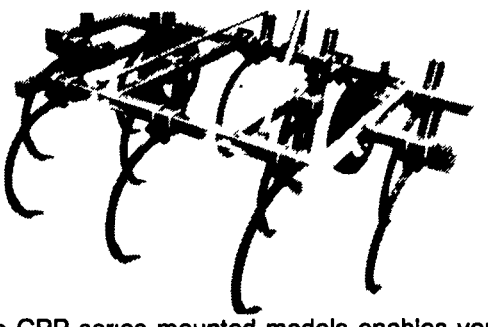


Rotary Frame Pulverizers; PT10 Series Transport Concept. Machine weight is hydraulically rotated over the wheels for transport. This reduces draw bar hitch weight considerably and provides ample clearance for transport. Also Available As Pull Type.

X-FOLD PULVERIZERS

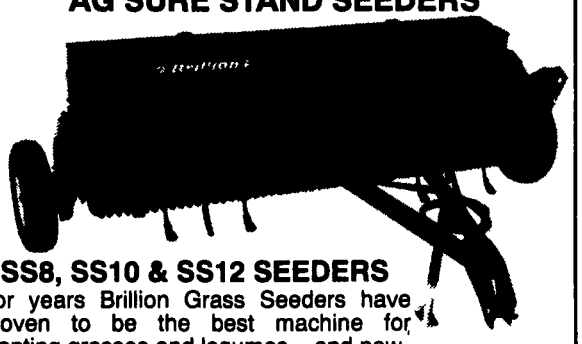
The X-Fold pulverizers are designed to meet the needs of today's larger acreage farmers...and Brillion offers them in two models and 11 sizes from 19' through 46'. Now available with 20" Ductile Wheels.

2 BAR & 3 BAR CHISEL PLOWS



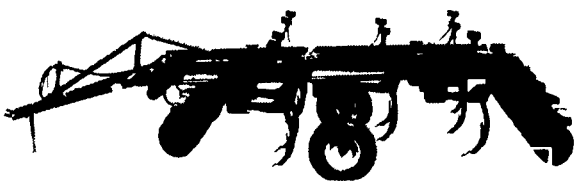
The CPP series mounted models enables you to turn short and fast... to transport easily, utilizing your tractor's hydraulic system, 7, 9, 11, 13 or 10,12,14,16 shank.

AG SURE STAND SEEDERS



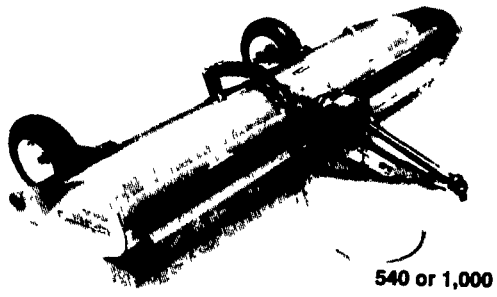
SS8, SS10 & SS12 SEEDERS
For years Brillion Grass Seeders have proven to be the best machine for planting grasses and legumes... and now they're even better! Larger, heavier boxes, high seeding rates, nylon lined seed meter, heavier frame, new drive system and more. 5 ft., 8 ft., 10 ft. Available in 3-point or pull type.

SOIL COMMANDERS
The Brillion Soil Commanders take Residue Management to the next generation of soil conservation efficiency.



The Soil Commanders are versatile tillage tools designed to meet the needs of the mid-size farmer who uses a 150-200 H.P. tractor. One of the keys to the machine's versatility is that it uses interchangeable shank legs and individually mounted disk assemblies instead of a disk gang. This makes possible a machine with disk assemblies on the front and rear of the frame with chisel plow or deep-ripper shanks on 15", 24", 27" or 30" spacings

FLAIL SHREDDERS
12 Ft. And 15 Ft.



540 or 1,000 RPM

FLAIL SHREDDERS Heaviest gearbox on the market eliminates the number one cause of downtime. Available in 12' and 15'. Either cup or side slicer knives. 540 or 1000 RPM.

KINZE ROW UNITS

You start with a simple, dependable row unit design with easy adjustments that give you exact depth control, and the most ideal seed-to-soil contact possible. At KINZE we call it "Precision Placement." Simply put, it's the toughest most dependable system in the field today.

How does it work? At the exact point of seed placement, 15" double disc openers and dual gauge wheels combine to mold a clean, consistent V-formed seed trench at a pre-set depth. Trailing V-closing wheels then securely press the seed trench walls on each side of the seed for positive seed-to-soil contact, virtually eliminating air pockets and leaving a loose "hill" of soil on top of the seed. It's the ideal environment for the emerging seeding.

Each row unit is indpendently adjustable for depth and down pressure. Spring-loaded parallel arms give you all the flexibility you need. Down pressure? Your choice. Standard, quick-adjustable dual springs for conventional planting, or quad springs (shown right) for conservation tillage. Each with four positions so you can set the unit's down force for your conditions.

TILLAGE AND CROP ROTATION EFFECTS ON CORN YIELDS

Dr. Gregory W. Roth
Associate Professor
Agronomy, Penn State

A recent study published in the Journal of Production Agriculture by M. G. Lund, P. R. Carter and E. S. Oplinger evaluated the effects of two tillage systems, no-till and moldboard plowing and crop rotations (continuous cropping, corn/soybean, wheat/soybean/corn, and soybean/wheat/corn) on the growth and yield of corn wheat and soybeans.

The study showed that continuous cropping reduced yields of corn by 10 percent and soybean by 15 percent compared to when the crops were in rotation.

Generally, yield reductions due to continuous cropping were greatest under no-till. The effects of rotation and tillage were less consistent on wheat as the effect varied from none in one year to a 36 percent reduction in another. With wheat, the tillage influence on the rotation effect was less consistent — in some years the tilled plots were most affected and in another year when Septoria and leaf rust diseases were severe, no-till treatments were more affected by continuous cropping.

Corn yields were similar in each of the three rotation sequences except for no-till corn after wheat, where yields were reduced by 6 percent. The authors suggest that the same allelopathic factors that reduce yields of corn following rye may cause the yield reductions following wheat, since the early season corn was about 8 inches shorter than the no-till corn following soybeans. In this study, the straw from the wheat was not baled or removed and this may have increased the potential for allelopathic effects.

This study did not show any difference in soybean yields for a one or two year rotation. Some previous research has shown a benefit from increasing the time between soybeans in the rotation to more than just one year, but the authors suggest it may need to be more than two years as they had in this study to be significant.

In summary, the study did not show any consistent improvement in corn and soybean yields by going to a three-year rotation including wheat.

In Pennsylvania, the the advantages of wheat in a rotation may be greater than in this study for several reasons: 1) In southeast Pennsylvania, wheat yields are not reduced by late planting following corn and soybeans as much as they are in Wisconsin; 2) In some areas, soybeans can be double cropped with the wheat, adding to the profitability of the wheat; and 3) control of perennial weeds in no-till programs can be successful following wheat harvest.

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOCIATION

Dr. Greg Roth
Associate Professor

In the midseason, excessive moisture was the problem for many fields. Some fields in the southcentral part of the state were saturated much of the time in June and July. This resulted in some stunted and yellow corn.

We would expect that corn growing in flooded or saturated conditions might eventually suffer from lack of oxygen in the root zone, root and crown diseases, and N loss from the soil due to both leaching and denitrification.

Many times corn in areas that are saturated will not come back and not yield well. This year, growers and dealers have told me that many of these fields turned green in August and looked fairly good. In a few of these fields that I examined, ear development was less than ideal even though the crop looked good from the road.

Soil crusting caused by planting into wet soils followed by hot May temperatures resulted in some deformed seedlings such as this.

Fields that responded the best appeared to be those that followed alfalfa or were manured heavily. Corn following corn and corn following wheat with borderline N fertility programs had more of a tendency to not green up as well.

We would expect these responses based on the potential for the mineralization of organic N from these fields.

Later in the season, crop maturity and leaf diseases took center stage on the crop. This year much of the crop seemed to silk on time but the grain fill period seemed to be lengthened somewhat by the lack of high temperatures in August.

In general, cool temperatures are good for avoiding high temperature stress in the crop and improving grain fill, but not for speeding along crop maturity. As a result, most of the crop was a bit later than normal but on the whole matured well enough to avoid much effect of frost on grain quality.

In some of the short season areas and where corn was planted late, though, there will be some immature corn that gets killed by frost.

Leaf diseases were a constant threat throughout the season and many of us were concerned even in late July with all of the foggy mornings that we had about severe disease outbreaks. Late in the season, gray leaf spot became severe in some areas, but for the most part the disease developed above the ear after the corn was dented, so the effects on yield should be generally small. Effects on standabilty of this later season epidemic may be significant so some preharvest scouting is warranted.

Even with the challenges that occurred during the season for some fields, overall the crop benefited from the ample precipitation throughout the season. Many of the well-drained and traditionally droughty soils have exceptional crops this year, which will make up for some of the problems that were encountered.

This year, producers who had a corn management programs that have the ability to produce under a variety of conditions will benefit the most from the good season we had. Key components of this year's program would be: 1) being prepared and equipped to plant as early as possible, 2) having a N fertility program that was on target for the situation, and 3) selecting a hybrid that had good disease resistance and high yield potential.

100 Million Bushels For New Uses

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Development Foundation and the National Corn Growers Association possesses an aggressive research and marketing strategy to find the most cost effective methods of discovering new uses for corn.

"We evaluate projects based on the overall potential for commercial and technical success, the potential impact on corn usage, the length of time to commercialization, and overall total cost," said NCDF President Everett Nordine, a farmer from Albert City, Iowa.

Russ Williams, chairman of NCGA's research and commercialization committee and Leaf River, Ill., farmer, said each one of the organization's projects have the potential to use more than 100 million bushels of corn each year.

NCGA/NCDF's research projects:

- Commercialize 100-percent biodegradable plastics using polylactic acid from corn.
- Catlytic conversion of glucose from corn to make certain polyols that are used as antifreeze, pharmaceuticals, and cosmetics.
- Identify a more cost efficient process of making butanol from corn. Manufacturers use butanol in such things as lacquers and brake fluid. Butanol is largely produced now from petroleum.
- Reduce the cost of ethanol by converting corn fiber to ethanol.
- Seek $162 million from the federal government for five to 10 years to identify the genes of corn. With this information, solutions may be found to long-standing constraints on the corn industry, such as second generation corn borer, corn rootworm, and grain quality at harvest.

When You Plant CFS Waxy Hybrids, You're Planting More Than Just Corn.

Facts prove that starch content is what makes corn the ideal animal feed. And that's what makes CFS Waxy Corn different from dent. CFS Waxy is 100% amylopectin starch...zero percent amylose. (Dent is 25% amylose).

Amylopectin starch is more digestible. That means CFS Waxy maintains no less than a 25% advantage over dent...in the feedlot or milking parlor.

On-farm tests show the average weight gain/feed efficiency in beef, sheep, swine and other animals fed waxy corn increased up to 10% over dent fed animals.

In dairy herds CFS Waxy increased butterfat, protein and milk production.

And, CFS waxy can be produced as a cash crop...often bringing premium prices when used for export.

tions that use narrow row technology in vegetables or other crops have been successful as far away as Michigan.

At Groff's farm, Roth spoke about the challenges growers face when trying narrow row corn.

"Most of the corn we grow in Pennsylvania and the corn-producing states is grown on 30-inch rows," said Roth. "To some folks that is narrow row corn." Rows measured 36-38 inches 15-20 years ago. In the years since, row spacing was reduced to 30 inches to make fields more productive.

Today's corn varieties have the potential to work with narrow rows. To do so, equipment has to be modified at planting and harvest to accommodate narrower rows.

At Groff's farm, a field that used to be in alfalfa was planted with narrow row corn, 15 inches wide. Theoretically, said Roth, the narrow row corn should provide early season growth and higher yields. Many growers have experienced a 5-6 percent grain yield increase as a result of using narrow rows. Producers have seen a 10 percent increase in yields for corn silage.

"Now we're at the point where it's time for producers like Steve and other folks to try this system on their farms," said Roth.

The advantages of narrow row corn include earlier canopy of the ground, which would help retain soil moisture and control weed growth. Other potential benefits include decreased soil erosion and increased nutrient uptake.

"It makes sense that we might be able to benefit from a system that captures more light and shades the ground," he said.

Also, nutrient uptake per acre is about 10 percent higher, "kind of important for folks interested in nutrient management and wanting a corn crop that takes up as much nutrients as possible," he said.

A conventional planting of field corn has populations on 30- inch rows to about 30,000-32,000 plants per acre. Narrow row corn density is about 38,000-42,000 plants per acre.

In many cases, producers can simply use a 30-inch planter and double back on the rows. The only drawbacks could be in harvesting the material.

"Harvesting is a little bit more of a challenge," said Roth. "Generally, even harvesting these plots the last few years, I don't find a whole lot of problems."

Equipment can be modified in a machine shop for $3,000-$4,000. Amortizing of equipment costs can be done at $5 per acre planting and $5 for harvesting.

A drawback could be the higher starter fertilizer costs since more product is necessary to accommodate more corn in narrower rows.

Also, for farmers using insecticide or starter fertilizer, "you might be looking at 50-100 percent more cost there," or about $5-$10 per acre additionally for narrow row, Roth noted.

Roth said that for silage corn, producers have adapted their equipment to narrow row corn accordingly. They use a German rotary head that fits on a self-propelled chopper.

But narrow row corn has benefits beyond yield.

"Some farmers in Maryland I've talked to say that if you get a windstorm or something, the stalks can sort of lay against one another. And they have said, if anything, they feel it's not that big of a problem."

Roth said he hears encouraging results from farmers. "I'm looking forward to seeing what kind of results we get here. I think this could be promising."

Bob Anderson, Lancaster County crops agent, said that "many of us, for many years, have been looking at whatever we can do to maximize our yields." But while many people think that more inputs are necessary for yields, the reverse may be true — that too many inputs can hurt yields.

That's why Penn State continues to examine what field inputs are needed and to adjust the rate of fertilizers accordingly.

Also, according to Anderson, work is under way to measure what those crops need.

Anderson spoke about the use of a chlorophyll meter that measures the level of the chemical substance in the corn leaf to determine the nitrogen needs of the crop. Using that technology, the Groff corn had sufficient nitrogen for a good yield.

Because the corn was rotated from alfalfa, there was no rootworm damage. However, in late July, European corn borer was damaging some corn in the field.

GUARD AGAINST ACCIDENTS

Dennis J. Murphy, Professor Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering
Penn State

A number of Pennsylvania farmers lose fingers, hands, arms, and even feet in corn harvesting equipment each year.

Some lose their lives. Nearly all of the accidents are preventable, but risk-taking, carelessness, or lack of knowledge allow them to happen.

Such tragedies can be prevented, however, especially if farm workers understand the hazards these machines present and practice the safety precautions needed to avoid them.

Most serious corn harvesting accidents involve either corn pickers or corn combines. Because these machines perform similar tasks, the dangers that are related to their operation are similar, too. Burns, severe cuts, entrapment, and amputations are hazards of both.

Corn pickers are usually involved in most severe corn harvesting accidents, mainly because of their easily clogged gathering mechanisms. Characteristically, corn picking accidents occur when the snapping rolls become plugged and the operator tries to remove debris or cornstalks while the machine is still running.

As he tugs at a plugged stalk or weed, the snapping rolls suddenly free up and begin to roll, yanking stalks or weeds forward at nearly ten feet per second. Before the operator can release his grip, his hand and arm have travelled about three and a half feet and into the machine. To make matters worse, once he is entangled in the machine it is often a very difficult and time consuming task to get him out.

Fortuantely, avoiding accidents like this is easy. Simply turn off the power to your corn picker before servicing it in any way!

The gathering mechanisms on corn combines do not become plugged as easily as those on corn pickers. Nevertheless, corn combine operators also run the risk of losing hands, arms, or feet if they try to unplug the rolls without first turning the machine off.

Most combine injuries occur when clothing, fingers, hands or legs are caught in the many exposed belts and gears. These accidents usually result in burns and severe cuts although amputations also occur.

As with the corn picker, shut your combine completely off to avoid injury whenever you leave the operator's platform to make adjustments. If some tasks must be carried out with the machine running, wear clothing that is comfortable but close-fitting. Be especially careful to avoid wearing flappy coveralls, and loose sleeves and cuffs.

Because of their size, it is dangerous to use corn harvesting equipment, particularly combines, near ditches or streams. The banks along these channels can give way under the picker or combine and upset it.

As a rule, to prevent accidents of this nature, keep the center of gravity of your machine as far from the edge of a channel as the channel is deep. For instance, if the bank rises six feet from a ditch, keep at least six feet between the bank's edge and the center of your machine.

Another factor that affects safety during corn harvest is the weather. During the rain and cold of late fall corn is frequently wet or icy. Wet or icy corn is more likely to clog the feeding mechanisms of both pickers and combines. It is also more likly to fall over, adding to the problem of muddy and slick field conditions, which make it difficult to stay on the corn rows. If you must harvest crops under these conditions, slow your groundspeed and take in less corn than you normally would. If you harvest corn early in the season, beware of hot and dry conditions.

Dry corn can catch fire and burn rapidly, endangering not only you and your equipment but your crops as well. Be alert for overheated bearings or belts and remove accumulations of chaff and stalks from near the manifold. For added safety and the ability to act quickly in an emergency, your harvesting machinery should be equipped with a fire extinguisher at all times.

Harvesting corn is a demanding task requiring constant alertness on the part of the machine operator. Because of poorly operating equipment and/or long working hours, farmers frequently become fatigued and then cannot maintain the level of awareness that is required to safely complete their task. This problem can be avoided, however, through careful planning before harvest.

For example, "downtime" can be reduced in most cases by inspecting and repairing corn harvesting equipment before harvest day arrives. And although long hours in the field are often necessary, working time can be structured in a way that will allow you to rest periodically. This can be done by setting up shifts and changing off once or twice a day if you are able to share the work with someone else, or by shutting off the machine and taking a break every couple of hours when working alone.

On corn harvesting equipment, as with all other farm vehicles, carrying extra riders is a serious hazard. Unnecessary riders not only run the risk of falling under the machinery or getting caught in exposed belts or gears, they also distract the driver and can affect his driving performance.

When operating corn combines, make sure no one enters the grain tank or stands near the stalk chopper when the machine is running. Occasionally children may be drawn by curiosity or a sense of adventure to the corn field where the harvesting is taking place. Therefore, always be on the lookout for children in the field ahead. The best way to prevent second party accidents, though, is to keep all individuals not involved in the harvest, especially children, far away from the corn harvesting operation.

A safe, efficient corn harvest in autumn depends a great deal upon how well you prepare for accidents. Be aware of the hazards the weather, fatigue, second parties, and embankments pose. Most of all, remember that the key factor in most corn harvesting accidents is the failure of the operator to stop the power before unclogging or servicing his equipment.

Whenever you need to leave your equipment to service it, do one very important thing before you do anything else: Turn it off!

Want To Graze Maize? Consider This Farmer's Experience

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

BETHEL (Berks Co.) — Cattle "go for the leaves" when grazing maize, according to Brian Mohn, manager of Gilles Richard Papa Farm.

Farms such as Papa often experiment with new and inexpensive methods of feeding beef cattle, One such experiment is the use of a "grazing maize" for the 119 head of commercial Angus raised by Mohn.

While still experimental, the use of grazing maize has met with limited acceptance and can be used as a supplement to hay feeding for finishing cattle. Mohn makes use of extensive rotational grazing on the farm.

The maize, available from Baldridge Hybrids in Nebraska, is grown on about four acres of what was previously a hay field.

There are two different plantings of the maize: one on 36-inch rows and one seeded on 18-inch rows (using 36-inch row spacing doubled back) at 40,000 plants per acre.

At a field day co-sponsored by Penn State Extension last July, 30 producers and agri-industry representatives toured the 350-acre (240 tillable) Papa Farm. Mohn spoke about some of the challenges of rotational grazing (about 70 acres) and using the "grazing maize."

"You have some obstacles you have to overcome, but it looks good," he said.

Of the four acres of maize, Mohn divides the area into paddocks for grazing the cattle using five-strand polywire. The fields used for grazing corn were previously in orchardgrass, which will be rotated into small grains in the fall.

In July, Mohn opened up the gates and allowed more than 100 head of cattle to graze on a half acre of the corn. The corn, measuring about five feet high, was just at the right stage to graze — at tasseling.

"They like it!" came one response from the producer, as the black Angus cattle fed on the lush leaves.

"Yeah, they do!" said another.

Within two hours, the cattle grazed most of the leafy surfaces of the maize, leaving the stalk intact.

Mohn expressed some reservations about using the grazing maize.

"I was afraid of (the cattle) knocking down more corn than they utilize," Mohn said. "Whenever you pasture corn stalks in the fall, the cattle tend to romp through the whole area first and then go back and pick it clean. That's what I'm hoping will happen."

The Baldridge hybrid maize is "a little bit more reasonable than most of your hybrid corn," or traditional field corn varieties, according to Mohn.

Mohn said the soil on Papa Farm is "extremely droughty. Next week, if we have a couple of 90-degree days, you can come up and see everything brown here. We dry out real quick."

Mohn said that he used a plow-down fertilizer of about 250 pounds of nitrogen in a 20-10-10 mix. He also used a couple gallons of starter fertilizer in the solution and topdressed the maize with 30 units of nitrogen per acre.

Mohn indicated that the grazing maize is useful only as a supplement, and that grass is "better than this stuff, which is high in water content." But there was no evidence of bloat in the cattle because the material was not high in nitrogen.

Mena Hautau, Berks agronomy agent, said that looking at the grazing maize was useful on the soil type at Papa, considering that many similar farms in the area "took a beating" she said over last year's summer drought.

Cattle will easily chew the "nice, tender parts" of the maize, including the leaves and the tassel, said Mohn. The leaves are more soft and palatable, with less lignin. Mohn indicated there may even be more sugar content in the leaves, compared to hay.

The field will be disced in the fall and small grains will be planted.

Overall, the material can work in some operations as a supplement to rotational grazing or traditional feeding, according to experts who spoke at the field day.

Farms such as Papa often experiment with new and inexpensive methods of feeding beef cattle, One such experiment is the use of a "grazing maize" for the 119 head of commercial Angus raised by Mohn.

Now Is Time To Join 5-Acre Club

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — PMCGA is pleased to announce continuing support for its Membership Incentive Program (MIP) that it is conducting in conjunction with a number of cooperating Pennsylvania seed companies.

The MIP with seed corn company sponsorship will entitle any corn grower who plants at least five acres of corn to a free bag of seed corn (standard size) with a three-year membership in PMCGA/NCGA.

This program applies to all three-year memberships, new or renewal.

To participate, simply complete the membership form and indicate the brand of seed corn you would like to try. Remember the theme of PMCGA's program is "Try Something New," so we hope you will use this opportunity to experiment a bit and not just get a bag of free seed corn.

You will receive a certificate for a free bag of seed from the company chosen from PMCGA. You will make the ultimate decision about which hybrid he to receive in consultation with the local seed corn dealer for the company you selected.

PMCGA will send the names and addresses by brand chosen to the appropriate seed corn company's statewide contact person and they will contact you.

In addition to this incentive program, you'll be joining more than 29,000 other growers across the country who are showing their support for the corn industry and the development of new corn markets.

Locally you'll be supporting PMCGA's activities such as Corn Talk, the PMCGA Corn Conference, and local corn promotion activities.

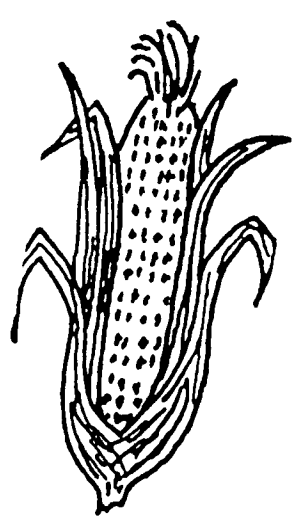
Hints For Freezing Corn On The Cob

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — According to the Colorado State University Cooperative Extension, if you want a taste of summer's delicious corn crop in mid-winter, this is the time to act.

Yes, you can remove the silk and freeze corn in the husks.

Some people are certain of this, but it's not the recommended procedure for long-term storage. To freeze corn on the cob, blanch small ears eight minutes, medium ears 10 minutes, and large ears 12 minutes. If you cut it from the cob, blanch it five minutes.

Or, try freezing corn (or other vegetables) by the tray pack method. Place chilled, well-drained vegetables in a single layer on shallow trays or pans, such as cookie sheets. Place in the freezer until firm. Remove and quickly fill prelabeled bags or containers. Freeze immediately. The advantage is that food doesn't freeze in a block, so you can pour what you need from the container and put the rest back in the freezer.



Bt Corn: Should You Buy It?

Steve Spangler
Entomologist
Penn State

Since about 1920, corn growers in the East have been dealing with yield losses from the European corn borer.

This insect takes a bite out of our corn production because it eats into the stems (see photo) and shanks of the ears, causing stalk and ear breakage, eats holes into the leaves in June ("shothole" damage), and eats the ear kernels. And if this is not enough for us, this damage can create entrance for plant diseases which cause stalk and ear rots, and may increase mycotoxin levels.

On the average, this insect takes about 3 to 6 percent of our yields, with some fields showing no economic losses but some showing much more than this average amount of loss.

The most obvious evidence of corn borer at this time of year is stalk and ear droppage and holes in the stems with "frass" (sawdust-looking material).

To look for this damage, take a kitchen knife (please be careful!), cut the plant off, and cut lengthwise down the stalk. Look for stalk tunnels and larvae. Also, take off the ear leaves and look for damage, and also on the shank.

Are you seeing significant stalk tunneling and larvae? Remember, each larva tunneling through a plant and making it to full size takes about 3-7 percent of your corn grain yield.

How many of you have actually done anything to control corn borer? Probably very few. Estimates in Pennsylvania indicate that only about 1 percent of our corn fields have used an insecticide to control corn borer — and probably for good economic reasons. It costs about $15 per acre to apply an insecticide (that doesn't include the costs of scouting for the insect) and you will only acheive an average of about 70 percent kill of corn borer. Put these two factors together and most growers have been making good economic decisions in not controlling corn borer. Also, in past years we have been dealing with grain prices of about $2.50/bushel.

Bt corn might be changing this picture. We now have plants ("Bt corn") which, because of biotechnology, have a new gene in them which produces a toxin that kills corn borer. This toxin is present in tissues, particularly the green tissues, and kills the young larvae or "worms" when they chew into the plant.

The effect on corn borer is quite dramatic: 95-100 percent of the young larvae are killed, compared to about 70 percent with normal insecticides. The other factor that this new technology has changed is the cost of control. Seed companies are stating that they will charge about a $7 per acre premium on a bag of Bt seed over a non-Bt seed. Compare this with the $15 or so cost of applying a conventional insecticide to control corn borer.

The result of these differences is that now, the use of Bt corn will pay off in 50-80 percent of the corn fields in the U.S. as opposed to less than 10 percent of the fields justifying a conventional pesticide treatment that we have had to date.

Also, don't forget the $4.50/bushel price we are seeing now — that may make both Bt corn and normal corn borer control more economical to use.

But there is an important assumption to this analysis which states that Bt corn will pay off in 50-80 percent of the corn fields in the U.S. The Bt hybrids have equal yield potential of the non-Bt hybrids. If the Bt gene is put into a hybrid that has superior yield potential to begin with, then this analysis probably holds true. However, if the Bt gene is put into a hybrid that has lower yield potential, then there may not be a benefit from using the Bt technology.

Put simply, it is quite possible that a superior non-Bt hybrid will still outperform an inferior Bt hybrid. In the end, yield of the corn hybrid will be some combination of having a good yielding hybrid to begin with, and having the addition of the Bt gene. Thus, hybrid trials are still as important as ever.

If this new technology means that in 50-80 percent of the corn fields of the U.S., using Bt corn will give economic returns in most fields. But that still leaves 30-50 percent of the fields in which that $7/acre premium may not pay off.

How does a grower maximize returns on this $7/acre premium?

Here is a rule of thumb to help corn growers maximize their investment in Bt corn: corn borer usually attacks the earliest planted fields (the tallest) during its June or first generation, and the latest planted fields (the younger ones, espcially in in silk stages) in its August or second generation. Fields planted in between the earliest and latest are less likely to be attacked. Also, because tillage destroys much of the corn borer population, fields near no-till may experience higher corn borer populations.

To give you a better feel for which of your fields corn borer is attacking, try a few things, and some of these you can do now. Think about which fields had the most June damage — the "shothole" damage. Were these the earliest planted ones in your area or farm? If so, these would be good ones in which to use Bt corn next year.

For the August and September damage (stalk tunnels, ear damage), you can visit your fields now and get a feel for where corn borer attacked. Were the ones attacked those which were showing green silk in August, when others were drying down? Then these might be good fields for Bt corn. Again, remember the rule of thumb: corn borer usually attacks the earliest planted fields in June and the latest planted fields in August.

Some of our research at Penn State is addressing this question: which fields (planting dates) do corn borer attack?

Bt corn is a dramatic new technology that all growers should be interested in seeing around for a long time, which brings this article to its last subject: Will insects become resistant to Bt corn if enough of it is planted in our fields? There is a lot of theory, but my opinion is that it is difficult to predict at this time whether resistance will occur.

All corn growers have an important role to play in this "resistance management," or helping us to preserve this valuable new technology: Watch your fields and look for corn borer. If you have a field of Bt corn and see corn borer damage, several possibilties exist. First, perhaps the field is not Bt corn as you think, or that Bt hybrid doesn't have a high level of Bt toxin. There are test kits which allow you to know whether that field has the Bt toxin in the plants. Second, you may have mixed Bt and non-Bt seed, or alternated rows of Bt and non-Bt, so that the larger worms moved from non-Bt to Bt plants (even with Bt plants, the larger worms may survive). Third, all Bt corn hybrids are not necessarily equal. Some have the toxin in all plant parts, whereas others may only have the toxin in the living green tissues, so that corn borer may survive on non-green plant parts.

These examples so far are not cases of resistance. However, if the whole field is Bt corn, and you are seeing many corn borer worms, you may have a case of resistance. In any case, it is important to contact the producer of the seed and your local extension agent and let them know that you may have a problem. In the end, it helps all corn growers for all of us to be aware of the potential of insects becoming resistant to Bt corn. Any potato grower dealing with potato beetle knows that insect resistance can be a significant economic concern. Let's preserve this valuable new technology.

USEFULNESS OF PSNT FOLLOWING ALFALFA IN WISCONSIN

Dr. Gregory W. Roth
Associate Professor,
Agronomy
Penn State

A 4-year study at the University of Wisconsin recently published in the Journal of Production Agriculture revealed that the presidedress soil nitrogen test (PSNT) often overestimates the N requirements for corn grown following alfalfa.

In this study, researchers L.G. Bundy and T. W. Andraski of the University of Wisconsin measured the response of corn to N at 24 sites between 1988 and 1991. At each site, corn followed alfalfa and a sample to 1 foot was taken when the corn was 6 to 12 inches tall.

Where no fertilizer was applied to the corn, the PSNT levels at sidedressing ranged from 10 to 43 ppm nitrate-N and at 11 of the 24 sites the PSNT level was less than 21 ppm, indicating that the field would be responsive to N fertilizer.

In Pennsylvania, we use 25 ppm as a critical level to decide whether fields would be responsive. Corn yields did not respond to N at any of the sites in the study, however, so the PSNT overestimated the N requirement at nearly one half of the sites. The authors believe that the failure of the test was caused by slow mineralization of residual N from the alfalfa at some of the sites, probably due to the lower soil temperatures that are often encountered in the spring in Wisconsin.

Most studies indicate that corn following alfalfa rarely responds to more than 30 to 50 pounds of additional N. The authors suggest that a small N application of 50 pounds per acre or less could be applied on those fields following alfalfa where the PSNT is below the critical level. They feel the PSNT is a good tool to convince growers on the need to take a credit for the alfalfa in their N fertility program, since often it will indicate that no additional N is necessary.

Pennsylvania research has revealed very similar results. We have documented a number of cases where PSNT level were relatively low following a legume sod, resulting in a higher than expected N recommendation.

Dr. Dick Fox and his colleagues at Penn State have found that to date the PSNT overestimated N requirements on 12 of 41 sites, or 29 percent of the time when following a legume sod that has not received manure. Fox also attributes this to inadequate mineralization of nitrate by the time the sample is taken. In all but one of the other sites the PSNT correctly predicted that there would be no response to additional N.

Thus a high PSNT level in a field following a forage legume is a reliable indicator of adequate N for the corn crop. However, a low level following a forage legume can be misleading and often indicates the need for more N than is really required.

Our recommendation has been not to use the PSNT on fields where corn is following a legume that has not been manured. On these fields, we suggest using the standard recommendations for corn following a legume of 20 to 50 pounds N/acre depending on the expected corn yield and the per cent legume in the old stand. PSNT sampling should be concentrated on fields that have received manure where the test has been found to do a reliable job of indicating whether additional sidedress N is required.

WHAT WILL BE THE 1996 CORN CROP?

The weather across the Corn Belt this year was anything but uniform.

Much of the western Corn Belt saw a dry spring followed by a cool, wet summer. The eastern Corn Belt experienced just the opposite — a wet spring followed by a dry summer.

The eastern belt was so wet this spring that much of the corn never got planted until June and some never got planted at all.

USDA's August Crop Report predicted a 118.7 bushel per acre national average corn crop and the September crop-report predicted a 120.2 bushel per acre average corn crop. If the September report proves accurate, it would be the third highest yielding corn crop on record!

I emphasized the word if in the previous sentence because USDA's August and September corn crop estimates have not been very accurate in past years, where a lot of corn got planted late, such as this year. For example, in 1974 USDA's August and September report predicted a 5 billion bushel crop. The actual crop ended up at 4.65 billion bushels.

In 1993, USDA's August and September corn crop report estimated the crop at approximately 7.3 billion bushels. The 1993 final crop ended up at 6.3 billion bushels.

Even last year, USDA's August and September reports showed a 8.1 and 7.8 billion bushel crop, respectively. The actual crop size turned out to be less than 7.4 billion bushels.

Even if USDA's September crop estimate is correct, we will only add 100 million bushels to next year's corn carryover (which would be the second lowest in history). If USDA has overestimated this year's late crop by anywhere near as much as they've overestimated previous late planted corn crops, we will have the tightest corn supply in history.

Prices as I write this do not reflect a tight supply situation. However, corn is still slightly higher than it was last year at this time.

USDA's projected national average price is slightly higher for the 1996 crop than the actual price was for the '95 crop — and that's assuming we have a 120-bushel per acre crop!

Don't be too surprised if we see a strong rally in prices this winter, followed by another good year in 1997.

The PMCGA wishes all of you a prosperous and safe harvesting season.

Silage Conference To Be Held At Hershey

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Silage production is a key component of dairy and livestock production systems across the U.S. and is especially important in Pennsylvania.

An upcoming conference, "Silage: Field to Feedbunk," will focus on many of the current silage production issues faced by the silage producers and the livestock industry.

The conference will be held at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center in Hershey Feb. 11-13.

Thirty-five presentations by leading scientists, consultants, and silage producers from around the U.S. will discuss all aspects of silage production and utilization from variety selection to kernel processing to troubleshooting silage feeding problems.

The conference will provide practical guidelines for producers and promote an integrated systems approach to silage production. The session topics are plant and field issues, harvesting a high quality silage, storage methods, additives management, mycotoxins and spoilage, silage quality evaluation, and feeding silage.

Dairy and livestock producers, consultants, industry representatives, veterinarians, extension agents, and university specialists who work with the silage industry should consider attending this important conference.

The registration fee is $160 if received before Feb. 5. Late or walk-in registration is $190. The fee includes admission to the conference and evening discussion sessions, a buffet lunch on Feb. 12, break refreshments, and a copy of the conference proceedings.

The room rates are $70 for a single or $74 for a double if you let the hotel know that you will be attending the conference. Rooms can be reserved by calling (717) 533-3311.

EL NINO EFFECTS

Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

Several Iowa State scientists — R. E. Carlson, D. P. Todey, and S. E. Taylor — recently published a report in the Journal of Production Agriculture in which they compared Midwestern corn yields, weather, and the El nino phenomenon since 1900.

They grouped years into El nino years, La Nina years, and in between years.

El nino years are characterized as those with a sea surface temperature warming in the eastern and central equatorial Pacific. La nina years are those with colder than normal sea surface temperatures in this section of the Pacific.

El ninos have generally been associated with better than average crop production with droughts common in between El nino events. Recently, an exceptionally long El nino (1991-1995) ended in the Pacific Ocean.

In years when the El nino was in effect, there was a tendency for yield to be above average and in years when the La nina was in effect, there was a tendency for yields to be lower than expected.

During the La nina, for example, Iowa corn yields from only one year were 10 percent above the average predicted yield, yet in six of 15 years were 10 percent below predicted yield.

During the 22 El nino years, seven had yields that were 10 percent above the average predicted yield and only three had yields that were 10 percent below the predicted yield.

The yield trends in this study indicated that above-average corn yields are associated with the El nino phase in Iowa and other Corn Belt States except Missouri because of more precipitation and cooler temperatures, especially during August.

One researcher has suggested this effect may cause storms to track more southward, resulting in more favorable weather for the Corn Belt. On the average, yields were about nine percent higher during El nino years compared to La nina years.

The authors also calculated the deviation from normal for precipitation and temperature in El nino years and found that there is some variation across the Corn Belt. Precipitation in August is 1.5 inches above normal in central Iowa in El nino years but only 0.5 inches above normal in eastern Ohio.

The authors conclude that while there is no clear physical relationship between the El nino and Midwestern weather, there are some strong tendencies for more favorable weather during El nino years.

As meteorologists improve their ability to predict the El nino, Midwestern yield forecasts should improve as well.

Corn Rootworm Insecticide Trials Show Effectiveness

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Entomologists use the common "Iowa" root rating system to determine damage to roots.

A rating of 1 is an undamaged root system, a rating of 6 is the most severely damaged (all three nodes are chewed completely back), and ratings of 2 to 5 are intermediate.

Economic damage begins to occur when the root rating exceeds 3 to 3.5. The best treatments (lowest root ratings: 2.6 to 3.2) in the Rock Springs 1995 trials in Centre County occurred with Counter 15G T-band, Fortress 2.5G T-band and in-furrow, all Force treatments, Furadan 4F broadcast+cultivation, and Lorsban 15G T-band. Less effective were the Dyfonate II T-band and Furadan 4F broadcast treatments (root ratings of 3.9 to 4.4).

All these treatments were significantly better than the untreated plots (root rating of 5.4). Because of the extreme drought in Pennsylvania in 1995, yield data were not reliable and are not reported.

There are two new rootworm insecticides registered for the 1996 growing season; Aztec and Fortress. Aztec is from Bayer, and is a combination of an organophosphate (2.0% tebuprimiphos) and a pyrethroid (0.1% cyfluthrin). Fortress, from DuPont, is an organophosphate (chlorethoxyfos), and will be available in either a 2.5G or 5G formulation. Both these compounds will be applied at much lower rates (2.5 oz. active ingredient/acre for Aztec and 2.6 for Fortress), compared to other granulars (typically 21 oz. active ingredient/acre).

Trials in Pennsylvania (Table 1) indicate that these new compounds compare favorably with others presently registered. As with other organophosphates, there is concern with insecticide/herbicide interaction in regards to plant injury. Typically, the greatest concern with insecticide/herbicide interactions is with using Counter, which has systemic activity in the plant, and ALS herbicides (sulfonylureas, imidazolinones, sulfonomids). Neither Aztec or Fortress are systemic, and reports from Iowa have not found herbicide interactions with them. Nonetheless, it is something to keep in mind.

Fortress 2.5G and Aztec are available in typical bags, and are applied as any other granular. These new granular materials are labeled for field corn, popcorn, sweet corn, silage corn, and seedcorn, and are also labeled for control of wireworms, white grub, and seedcorn maggot. They are also labeled for cutworms, but this remains to be effectively evaluated. Please read the label of these products carefully, as there are special precautions relative to application near water, wildlife and fish. During 1996, Fortress 5G will be sold and applied only through the Smartbox™, a closed handling system from DuPont that mounts on the planter. If you need more details, contact your local DuPont representative.

Herbicide Rotational Crop Restrictions

Below are selected corn and soybean herbicides that are relatively new or have the potential to cause problems in rotational crops. Though the majority of these are "new" chemistry products, keep in mind that older herbicides such as the triazines (e.g., atrazine, Bladex, Princep, Sencor) and chloroacetamides (e.g., Dual, Micro-Tech, Frontier, Harness, Surpass) still have certain rotation restrictions as well The information listed in this table is our interpretation of label statements or a "best-guess" estimate. Consult the product labels if two or more herbicides are applied during the same season. Before applying any herbicide, consult the most recent label.

RYE, MANURE AND NO-TILL IN CORN SILAGE DEMONSTRATION

Dr. Greg Roth
Asociate Professor

Mel Brown
Centre County
Extension Agent

Many dairy farms face the same dilemma. They need to grow corn silage, they need to spread manure, and they would like to plant no-till corn to conserve soil and labor resources.

For many, results with no-till corn silage production have been less than satisfactory, while some others make the system work quite well.

A field demonstration conducted in Centre County during the past year addressed some of the management considerations necessary to make the system work more effectively.

The demonstration was conducted on the farm of John and Todd Ishler in Spring Mills and was sponsored by Centre County Cooperative Extension, Penn State Department of Agronomy, and the Pennsylvania Sustainable Ag Association (PASA). Agway and Pioneer Hi-bred also contributed to the project.

Two 8-acre third and fourth year corn fields were used to demonstrate rye cover crop management effects and to assess the practical problems from using a rye/corn silage system in Centre County.

In late September, rye was no-tilled into ⅔ of each strip. Fall rye growth was excellent and in November the fields received 6,000 gallons of dairy manure. The rye was completely and uniformly covered with manure at that point. Almost immediately, the field was covered with snow for most of the winter, except for the January thaw.

The rye and manure appeared to limit erosion fairly well, since, during the winter, runoff caused some erosion in the bare strips but not in the areas seeded to rye. By spring, the manure had decomposed to the point that it was difficult to see much evidence of it.

Based on this experience, it appears that corn stubble fields with a good rye cover crop are excellent candidates for fall-applied manure. They limit erosion and provide a good no-till seedbed in the spring.

In the spring, the rye was killed at two different dates with an application of Roundup Ultra with 2,4-D added for broadleaf weed control. The herbicide was applied on April 18, when the rye was 4-5 inches tall or on May 4 when the rye was 8-10 inches tall. Because of wet weather, planting was delayed until May 15.

The soil under the late rye kill dried out more slowly because of the mulching effect and was marginal at planting. Soil conditions in the early kill and no rye plots were excellent. The rye residue from the early rye kill decomposed rapidly and was minimal at planting. Stands were good in all treatments, averaging 24,000-26,000 plants per acre. Plant growth was good as well, except that the late killed rye was slightly yellow for about two weeks early in the season.

We concluded from this that the early kill treatment gave us the best compromise of the three treatments: good overwinter erosion control, a reduced potential for possible allelopathic effects from the rye, and minimal residue to interfere with planting and soil drying.

In mid-June, we used the PSNT to estimate the N requirement on the field. The test called for 75 units of N, which was applied at the eight-leaf stage. By this time most of the rye residue from the late planting was decomposed. Growth was good in all plots throughout the season. Two row strips were harvested from the middle of each plot for the length of the field. The late-killed rye treatment averaged 27.1 tons/acre, the early killed rye averaged 26 tons/acre, and the no rye treatment averaged 24.6 tons/acre, all at 65 percent moisture.

We speculate that some of the advantage of the rye treatments may have been that they helped to conserve some of the manure nitrogen that was lost in the no rye treatment. This was probably more important this year than usual because of the excessive rainfall that occurred during the season.

We concluded from this demonstration that no-till corn can be successful in a manured rye cover crop system, but careful management is important.

Avoiding soil compaction, spreading manure in fall rather than late spring, timely rye planting and kill, and careful nitrogen management are all components of the system that need to be addressed to make it work well.

Producers who attended the field day indicated that they often encounter problems with late spring manure applications that make no-till corn silage production difficult. Consequently, not all corn fields may be candidates for this system. On those that are candidates, however, we can take advantage of the labor savings and reduction of soil erosion and runoff that the no-till system provides.

New Products Stabilize Markets

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association's list of research initiatives target new products that could potentially utilize up to 100 million bushels of corn a year.

"Corn growers want significant growth and meaningful results," said Russ Williams, chairman of the organization's research and commercialization committee.

The Leaf River, Ill., farmer addressed more than 300 scientists and researchers who attended the NCGA Corn Utilization Conference in early June.

The NCGA facilitates research that will bring new, corn-derived products to market. One of those products could be commercialized as early as this fall.

Numerous companies are racing to convert corn-derived polylactic acid into 100 percent biodegradable plastic products.

Todd Werpy, director of research and business development for the NCGA, said using the corn-derived chemical is more economical than using chemicals derived from petroleum.

"It's headed toward commercialization," said Werpy. "The only issue now is volume."

Werpy expects compost leaf bags to be the first product consumers see from plastic made using corn-derived polylactic acid.

Other promising areas of research include using corn-derived butanol as a solvent in such things as brake fluid and lacquers, using corn-derived acetic acid to preserve food, converting corn-derived carbohydrates into non-toxic printers ink and anti-freeze, and converting corn-derived pentose which could lower the cost of producing ethanol.

HARVEST UNDER WAY

Dr. Greg Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

Another corn harvest season is upon us and it is time to plan accordingly.

This year we have a good crop and reasonable prices, so it will be particularly important to do a careful job when harvesting to capture the yield and preserve the quality of the crop that we have in the field. A number of issues will be important to consider in harvesting this year's crop.

For many farms, this year's crop will be large, so plans should be made now for storing and marketing the crop. Hopefully most producers have considered this before now and have plans in place. Field scouting should also be completed now and those fields with potential standability problems should be harvested first.

During the last two weeks, I visited a number of fields that had gray leaf spot that could contribute to poor standability. To assess standability, squeeze the stalk to check to stalk integrity. Fields with stalks that crush easily will likely have the most standability problems.

Another problem to scout for are ear molds. In a few fields, bird damage and wet weather have contributed to sporadic ear mold problems. Planning to harvest these fields early, preferably for shelled corn. Removing the fines and cobs will help to reduce the potential for mold problems in feed.

Crop maturity is key situation to monitor this fall. Some fields that were planted late will be at risk to mature before frost. Grain development should be monitored and if the crop will not reach the dent stage by frost then a silage or high moisture ear corn harvest option should be considered because of the potential for low test weights and slow dry down.

High moisture earlage is a good option for immature corn since the cobs will contribute to the yield and at higher moisture contents are digested well by ruminants. The exception to this would be when the cob and grains show signs of mold. Then, harvesting as high moisture shelled corn has been shown to reduce potential mold and mycotoxin contamination.

Monitoring crop moisture is essential to maintain the quality of the high moisture corn or ear corn in storage. Common mistakes are for high moisture corn to be harvested too dry and ear corn to be harvested too wet.

In general, high moisture shelled corn should be greater than 26 percent moisture except in sealed silos, where it should be greater than 22 percent for adequate storage. Ear corn should preferably at 21 percent grain moisture or less, but can be stored slightly wetter if stored in narrow bins or bins with air drying capability..

When storing high moisture corn, remember to fill fast, pack well, and seal well. Avoid leaving loads out overnight or, worse, making piles of wet corn that will not be ensiled quickly. Slow filling can cause the crop to heat before the ensiling process starts. Heating reduces the quality of the feed and allows yeasts and molds to proliferate. This causes layers in the silo that will be lower quality and will spoil more readily during feedout. Warm temperatures during silo filling will make wet corn heat and spoil more quickly.

While harvesting, also note harvest losses. The rule of thumb for harvest losses is that 20 kernels in a ten square foot area represents 1 bushel per acre. Ear corn losses can be estimated by counting the dropped ears in a 1/100th acre row length (two 30-inch rows 87 feet long). Each full size ear in this sample area represents one bushel per acre.

PSNT FOR CORN

Doug Beegle
Penn State
Soil Fertility Specialist

The Presidedress Soil Nitrate Test (PSNT) for corn has been used successfully in Pennsylvania for several years.

This nitrogen soil testing approach is based on taking soil samples just before sidedressing — after the spring wet period but before the period of major nitrogen demand by corn — and determining the nitrate-nitrogen available in the soil at that time.

If the test level is greater than 21 parts per million NO_3-N, no sidedress nitrogen is recommended. If the test is below this level, the results of the test are then used to make sidedress nitrogen recommendations.

This test is primarily recommended for use on fields where there are significant organic nitrogen contributions such as a history of manure applications or forage legumes in rotation. It does an excellent job of verifying when these organic sources of nitrogen are adequate for the crop. This test is of limited value on most fields without organic nitrogen contributions, because these fields generally have low levels and thus the standard recommendations are suitable.

Since this test is somewhat unique compared to regular soil tests, it is probably worthwhile to review the procedures for using the PSNT since it will soon be time to test. The PSNT procedure is as follows:

1. Only apply a minimum of fertilizer nitrogen in the spring. (Starter fertilizer and/or nitrogen used as a herbicide carrier.)

2. Apply manure based on the history of the field, a manure analysis, how the manure will be handled, and on crop requirements for nitrogen estimated from the expected yield and crop history.

3. Take soil samples when the corn is 12 inches tall or at least a week before planned sidedressing.

4. Sample the fields by taking 10 to 20 cores to a 12-inch depth if possible. If not sample as deep as you can. Avoid starter bands and other atypical areas. Because of sampling problems, this test cannot be used on fields that received injected fertilizer or manure.

5. Combine and crumble the cores and dry as quickly as possible. Spread the samples out in the sun or under a heat lamp in a well ventilated area to dry. The samples must be dry within 24 hours.

6. The sample can be sent to a reputable soil testing lab for soil nitrate-nitrogen analysis. A reliable field test kit for soil nitrate-nitrogen can be used to determine the nitrate-nitrogen level in the sample.

7. Calculate the adjusted nitrogen recommendation from the worksheet below.

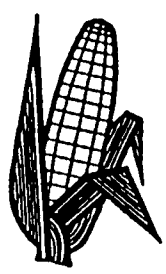
There are several areas that seem to cause the most problems with the PSNT. First, many people try to take the test too early. It is important for the test to work properly that the corn be at least 12 inches tall at the top of the whorl when you sample. A second problem related to timing of sampling is taking samples immediately after a heavy rain. Experience has shown that the test works best if you allow 2 to 3 days following a heavy rain before sampling for the PSNT.

Sampling too soon after a rain can give a false low reading indicating that there is less nitrogen available than there really is. Third, and this is the tough one, for the test to work the best the samples should be taken to a 12-inch depth.

Unlike phosphorus and potassium, nitrate will readily move deeper into the soil. Everyone complains about this deep sampling but it could be worse because taking deeper samples would be even better. Some states recommend two or even four-foot deep samples for nitrogen testing.

This 12-inch depth seems to be a reasonable compromise between optimum accuracy of the test and sampling practicality. Finally, the samples need to be dried immediately. They should be completely dry within one day of when they are taken. I have seen sample nitrate nitrogen levels increase by a factor of 2 to 3 times just from sitting around damp over a weekend.

Agronomy Factsheet #17 "Presidedress Soil Nitrate Test for Corn," which explains the PSNT in detail, is available from Penn State Cooperative Extension offices.



Statewide Corn Checkoffs

What Is a Checkoff?

For each bushel of corn sold in 19 different states a specified rate or checkoff is invested by the seller at the first point of sale. These monies are then collected at the state level. A state checkoff or promotion board of farmer directors invests the money in state programs of research, market development and education to increase the demand for corn. The farmer directors also invest in the National Corn Development Foundation which is the financial watchdog of the National Corn Growers Association. Then on a national level NCGA invests checkoff dollars in research, market development and education with the mission to enhance corn profitability and usage to improve the quality of life in a changing world.

Pennsylvania Corn, Soybean Conference Set

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Plans are nearly complete for the 1997 Corn and Soybean Conference scheduled Feb. 7 at the Holiday Inn at Grantville.

This year's program promises to be a good one and will feature Dave Cruse, an entertaining ag broadcaster from Iowa, who will provide us with his forecast for the 1997 corn and soybean markets.

The program will also feature a recap of the growing season for corn and soybeans by agronomist Mike Brubaker, president of Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service. Dr Jim Bierlien from Penn State's Ag Economics and Rural Sociology Department will take a look to the future in another presentation and ask producers if they are ready for managing farms in the 21st century.

Other topics on the program include the performance of Bt corn hybrids this year, a report on the activities of the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board, a review of some of the new uses of soybeans, and an update on some of the added value soybean varieties that are being developed.

The conference will also include ag industry exhibitors, Five Acre Corn Club and Soybean Yield Contest awards, and reports from the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers and the Pennsylvania Soybean Board. More information on registration will be available soon. Mark your calendars and plan to attend.

Dr. Greg Roth
Asociate Professor

On many dairy farms in Pennsylvania, corn and alfalfa are grown on rotation on at least some of the acres on the farm. In practice, rotations often vary in length from three to more than five years in each crop.

A new Penn State study I am conducting in cooperation with an ag economist, Dr. Jay Harper and an entomologist, Dr. Art Hower, will focus determining the best corn alfalfa rotation on dairy farms in the state.

The initial phase of this project will be to evaluate the rotations using yield information from ongoing crop rotation studies at Rockspring and recommended practices based on the Agronomy Guide. We have found that shorter, 3-year rotations offer many advantages such as higher corn yields, higher hay yields, reduced need for soil insecticides on corn, reduced potash needs on alfalfa, and more potential to take advantage of no-till corn.

Compared to a four-year rotation, for example, 100 fewer pounds of insecticide and 4,600 fewer pounds of nitrogen fertilizer would be needed on a 300-acre farm per year because of a greater percentage of the corn would follow alfalfa, where N fertilizer recommendations are low and soil insectides are not needed. Likewise, with no fourth year alfalfa fields, potash requirements would be reduced by 4,400 pounds on the farm since these fields frequently have high requirements for K. These fields may also have slightly lower yields than second or third year fields.

The downside of the three-year rotation is that hay fields need to be reseeded more frequently and some nice three-year-old alfalfa fields need to get killed to rotate to corn.

We are in the process of determining the best way to estimate the whole farm profitability of these various rotations to find the conditions that the shorter rotations make the most sense.

The next phase of this project has been to work with two working dairy farms and evaluate the potential of various rotations on their system. Adding real-world considerations to the project made it more complex. For example, both farms we selected indicated they liked the three- to four-year rotations, but they also like to harvest a first cutting of hay before they rotate a hay field to corn. Based on this input, we added another rotation to our project for consideration.

Some of our preliminary profitability estimates indicate that indeed this double crop hay/corn rotation might be the most profitable alternative, provided that the hay can be harvested early, and the corn yields at least 75 percent of a normal crop. To do this, however, requires good soils, adequate labor, good management, and a long season. Otherwise the double crop rotation can be costly.

Based on this and other conversations with the producers, we realized we need some actual hay and corn yield data to carefully estmate the economics on these rotations under production situations. This year we have been measuring yields and monitoring pest problems such as western corn rootworm and clover root curculio, an alfalfa pest that causes stand decline in third and fourth year alfalfa.

Our inital findings seem to indicate that short rotations probably do have a place on dairy farms in Pennsylvania, but we need to identify the conditions where they fit best. These conditions will include the pest levels on the farm, the amount of manure available, the yields of corn and alfalfa during each year, and the feed needs of the farms. Commodity prices and conservation requirements will also have some effect. We also need better software to compare complex whole farm economics of the various rotations.

When It Comes To Corn, Some Risk-Reducing Instruments Are Risky

John R. Brake
Department of Agriculture, Resource, And Managerial Economics
New York State College Of Agriculture And Life Sciences
Cornell

In these times of the highest corn prices in years — if not ever — corn producers and country elevators should be prosperous and happy. Right? Wrong.

It seems that a number of grain merchandisers, many in the upper Midwest and a few in Ohio and other areas, have been offering a "flexible" hedging contract, described as a Hedge-To-Arrive (HTA) contract, as a marketing tool to attract farmers.

With the strong upward move in corn prices, the contracts have gone sour. A number of farmers have threatened not to honor the contracts, many elevators have lost big money, and there is potential for some of the elevators to go bankrupt, perhaps with significant losses to their lenders as well.

Elevators commonly contract to buy corn from their farmer customers specifying an amount, price, and delivery date. A common practice involves the delivery of corn to the elevator at harvest, with only the timing of price determination specified in the contract. The elevator hedges its position by selling futures contracts.

When the farmer delivers (or elects to set price of the corn previously delivered), the elevator buys back the futures contract, thereby completing the hedge. The futures position protects the elevator against price declines after the forward contract has been made, and losses resulting from price declines in the cash market are offset by gains from the futures position.

Under the HTA contract, however, the farmer can deliver the corn anytime. That is, delivery date is not specified. Apparently many people, including many farmers and some contractors, even interpreted the contract to mean they could decide to forego delivery of old crop corn in, for instance, June and make delivery instead of '96 crop corn in December.

So what happened? As the corn price went up, more and more farmers forward contracted to get the increasingly favorable cash price. The elevators coughed up more and more margin money as their short positions became further and further below market prices.

Farmers saw the cash price go higher and higher. So rather than deliver corn with cash contracts for $3.50 in May, for example, why not sell the corn at $4.50, and then make good on the delivery (i.e., the HTA contract) in December after the 1996 crop is in?

More importantly, if the elevator hedges using current crop, July for example, and the farmer doesn't deliver the corn until December, the spread between July and December futures (old versus new crop) tends to widen substantially in a rapidly rising market. The elevator might sell a July futures contract and then have to "roll it over" to a December contract. The catch is that the July contract may have risen $1.50 while the December contract only rose $.75. In rolling it over the elevator loses $.75 per bushel.

Apparently, no one ever envisioned 1996 market conditions when the HTA marketing strategy was developed.

Pa. Corn Production Higher

HARRISBURG — Based on Sept. 1 conditions, Pennsylvania's 1996 production of corn for grain is expected to be higher than last year, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Yield of corn for grain is expected to be a record 123 bushels, up 27 bushels from last year, up three bushels from the August 1, 1996 forecast, and three bushels more than the previous record yield of 1994.

Acreage for harvest is estimated at 1,050,000. Production is expected to be 129.2 million bushels, 37 percent more than last year.

At the United States' level, corn for grain production is forecast at 8.80 billion bushels, 19 percent above the 1995 crop. Acreage for harvest is expected to be 73.3 million acres. The yield is forecast at 120.2 bushels per acre, up 1.5 bushels from last month and up 6.7 bushels from last year.
